SAYS LLOYD FEARED PLOT BY KIN

ACCUSED BROTHERS, SAYS SMITH

Daniel L. Smith of Needham, who is suing John Bross Lloyd, the "spendthrift millionaire," for $35,000, as the remainder of a fee of $50,000 asked by Attorney Smith for removing a guardianship from young Lloyd, testified today before Master F. E. Hammond that Lloyd had begged him to try and break the guardianship imposed by his brothers, who, Lloyd said, "had tried to kill him so that they could get his share of the Lloyd millions."

This sensational testimony was a part of Attorney Smith's statement in his suit to show why he is entitled to the additional $35,000 for his professional services in connection with the famous case.

Daniel H. Ruggles is Smith's attorney, and Braildis, Dunbar & Nutter represented by Attorneys J. J. Kaplan and Edward F. McClennen, appear for Lloyd.

Attorney Smith said:

Ilam B. Lloyd, Henry Demarest Lloyd of Boston and Joan D. Lloyd of Chicago.

"He said that he believed his brothers were bad men and that they wanted to kill him so that they would get his money.

"He told me of one occasion in Chicago when he charged his brother William took him to a stateroom and got him to attempt a high dive into very shallow water, hoping that he would break his neck. As it was, he said, he suffered injuries.

Attorney Smith is the uncle of Miss Mary I. Sullivan, who has filed a $100,000 breach of promise suit against John Bross Lloyd. Smith's wife is a younger sister of Mrs. W. E. McGraw, known as the "College widow," and it was through that family alliance that Smith first came to know young Lloyd.

Lloyd said that his brothers had hired detective to ruin his reputation, and on another occasion, hired two men to kidnap him and place him in an institution to restrain him from spending his money.

Mellen May Escape Death Case Trial

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., March 10.—Ex-President Mellen of the New Haven Railroad won an important victory today in his fight to escape trial on the charge of manslaughter in connection with the fatal wreck at Westport, when Judge Tuttle of the Superior Court sustained two demurrers made by Mellen's counsel to the warrant on which his arrest was ordered. State Attorney Judson probably now will move to amend the warrant. If he fails, Mellen will escape trial.

MISS MARY I. SULLIVAN, who sued John B. Lloyd for alleged breach of promise and whose uncle is now suing him for $35,000.

AUTO TRUCK GOES THROUGH WALL OF HOUSE

A big auto truck ran into a house at No. 2042 Washington street today, ploughing two feet through the front wall, shook the building so that people on upper floors were thrown out of bed, and sent pieces of shattered glass showering over the cobbler whose shop was thus invaded.

The truck is owned by Walter J. Barry—driven by Michael J. Barron—both of Roslindale. The steering gear went wrong. John Rudnick's cobbler shop got the worst of the blow. Mrs. Concetti Manjial with two children, abed on the third floor, was thrown out; as was Joseph Cunta on the second floor. The damage was "slight"—perhaps a hundred dollars, and when its steering gear had been repaired the truck departed under its own power.

BIG FEDERAL RAID ON RED SOX

ULSTER IS EXPECTED TO YIELD

By HERBERT TEMPLE.

LONDON, March 10.—Although radical Unionists leaders declared today that the government proposals in regard to Home Rule and Ulster province, made in Parliament yesterday by Premier Asquith, were unfeasible, there was an appreciable lessening of the tension today. The prospect of civil war in Ulster province, as a last resort of the Protestant anti-Home Rule forces, also seemed less formidable. Newspapers with a leaning toward the Unionist cause in Ulster were divided in opinion, but some urged a cautious course in the belief that the Asquith proposals opened the way to a settlement of one of the most troublesome questions of the century.

"SOME PROGRESS MADE."

The granting to the electors of the Ulster counties the right to say whether they wanted exclusion from the operation of the Home Rule bill was satisfactory to most of the Unionist papers, but the time limit of six years' exclusion was bitterly attacked.

However, the declaration of Sir Edward Carson, chief of the anti-home rulers in Ulster, "That some progress had been made toward a solution," was accepted as an indication that the Ulster Unionists would eventually accept some proposition based on the proposals made by the government in the House of Commons.

The view was held among some of the anti-home rule chiefs that "Anything might happen" within six years, which would enable the Unionists to remove the six-year limit of exclusion.

TWO GENERAL ELECTIONS.

Some of the Unionists looked at the situation in this light: Assuming that the present British Parliament should be dissolved before the end of 1915 and the Irish parliament provided for in the Home Rule bill assemble in 1915, the next session of British Parliament could hardly last beyond 1920. According to the government proposals on Ulster, the six years' exclusion was to date from the assembling of the first Irish parliament. That would give the Ulster counties exclusion until 1921.

But in the meantime there would probably be two general elections in the British Isles, with the possibility of a Unionist government succeeding that of the Liberals.

With the Unionists in power it would be a comparatively easy matter to bring about legislation wiping out the six-year limit.

KING'S INFLUENCE SEEN.

King George is believed to have had a hand in inducing Premier Asquith to make the proffered concessions, and it is contended that if His Majesty continues his activity in this respect the two parties may be enabled to bridge over the differences separating them.

The stumbling blocks in the way of a settlement of the Irish question are the "die hard" Unionists, who want a general election at any cost, in the hope of defeating the government, and there are also the Nationalists who follow William O'Brien, who are opposed to any kind of exclusion bill granted to Ulster. It is doubtful whether John E. Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, can carry the members of his party any further in the way of placating the Ulster Unionists.

Lord MacDonnell, a Liberal peer, who was permanent under-secretary for Ireland from 1902 to 1908, said today that the government proposals seemed to furnish a basis for settlement, while Lord Dunraven, Conservative Irish peer, expressed doubt whether Premier Asquith's offer would bring about a satisfactory solution.

HUGE BIDS FOR SIX SOX MEN

By JACK CONWAY.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 10.—A representative of the Federal League fired the first gun of President Gilmore's new war on organized baseball here today by making a wholesale raid on the Boston Red Sox. He made big offers to Ray Collins, Larry Gardner, "Dutch" Leonard, George Foster, Steve Yerkes and Harold Janvrin.

The price offered these six men was so large that the man who made them was confident of getting Leonard, Foster, Yerkes and Janvrin at least, even if he did not land Collins and Gardner. All of the men mentioned, except Collins, are now under Red Sox contracts. The four last named are among the lowest salaried men on Bill Carrigan's team, and they were picked for temptation for that reason.

KILLIFER CASE STARTED IT.

Until Catcher Killifer, formerly of the Philadelphia Nationals, failed to report to the Chicago Federals, the "outlaws" made no effort to get organized baseball players who had signed contracts.

Killifer, however, had signed a Federal contract and then jumped back to the Phillies. When he failed to report to Joe Tinker, the Chicago Federal manager, President Gilmore of the Federals declared that forthwith his league would offer all kinds of money to men under contract with organized baseball teams and that henceforth it would be a war to the finish.

The Federals have been dickering with Ray Collins for a long time. Collins had an understanding with Manager Carrigan as to the salary the Red Sox would pay him, but has not yet signed a contract. The "outlaws" made him a huge offer. In the absence of Joe Wood, Collins is Carrigan's most promising pitcher, and Collins indicated that he would use the fact to get as much money as possible out of baseball.

GARDNER HAS $5,000 CONTRACT.

Larry Gardner, the third base speed boy, is under a contract with the Red Sox which has two more years to run. He gets $5,000 a year. The Federals have offered him more. Leonard is Carrigan's second best lefthander and Foster is one of his most promising young right handers. Yerkes was late in reporting here. Janvrin, the Boston recruit, is working on a year's contract paying $2,200.

President Lannin of the Red Sox arrived here late this afternoon with the last party of Bostonians. He declared that the Federals would get none of his players as he had plenty of money and would go the limit to protect his team against raids.

H. J. WOODBERY GIVES VERSION OF "LOVE LOG"

Henry J. Woodberry, the defendant in the $25,000 breach of promise suit of Miss Margaret Clarke, a corset model, took the stand today and gave his version of Miss Clarke's "love-log," which she claimed to have kept in al the seven years of their alleged acquaintanceship.

Woodberry testified that he never mentioned Miss Clarke to his father or mother.

"I never asked her to marry me. I told her that it was impossible. I told her that I was not in a position to do so, and was not fixed financially so that I could marry. My mother was very ill and I told her so. I had to stay at home with my mother for days at a time.

"I never wanted to live with her. "I never wanted to die with her.

INSIDE STORY OF HOW CHIEF MULLEN WAS FORCED OUT

Former Fire Commissioner Charles H. Cole this afternoon told for the first time the real inside story of how Mayor Curley came into the the office of the Fire Commissioner and declared:

"CHIEF MULLEN HAS GOT TO GO."

Mayor Curley has denied that he forced Chief Mullen to retire. Mullen, who retired after Deputy Chief Grady had been appointed Commissioner over his head, declared that the Mayor had treated him "rotten."

CONTRADICTS THE MAYOR'S STORY.

FITZGERALD DELAYS PLANS FOR FUTURE

WASHINGTON, March 10.—"I have made no plans for the future, that's honest, but if I had I could not discuss them at this time for obvious reasons," declared former Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston here today.

"I left Boston three weeks ago for Palm Beach, and I had a good long rest. I have forgotten politics and the Mexican situation and taken on weight.

"We leave this afternoon for New York, and will stop over there, arriving in Boston Friday or Saturday. I have seen Representatives Murray, Mitchell and Phelan, but we did not talk politics. After my arrival in Boston I shall decide upon my future plans."

The former Mayor added that as his trip was one purely for recreation.

Hunters Buried in a Snowslide

DAWSON, March 10.—The deaths of Kenneth Whitehorn and Charles Anderson, formerly of Dawson, who were overwhelmed by a snowslide while hunting sheep near Chisana City, were reported by Otis Jenkins upon his arrival here today.

The appointment by the Mayor of Grady started the hottest war the fire department has ever known, and it is now at its height. The Mayor and former Chief Mullen fired hot shot at each other, but through it all Commissioner Cole said nothing about the part Mayor Curley played in Mullen's retirement.

This afternoon he broke silence and told the AMERICAN the whole story. It is a flat contradiction of the Mayor's statement that he would have been glad to have had Mullen stay in the department and that he (Curley) would have restored his salary as soon as the city treasury would permit.

Major Cole said this afternoon:

"Mayor Curley has said in the public press that had no intention of removing or retiring Chief Mullen.

"The facts are these, and are not as Mayor Curley would have the citizens of Boston believe. Mayor Curley came down into my office at Bristol street after I had tendered my resignation as commissioner and before he had named my successor, and talked matters over regarding a lease of the buildings occupied by the fire department on Bristol street.

PROPOSED $3,000 PENSION.

"I had heard in the meantime that a movement was on foot to 'get' Chief Mullen and I so told Mayor Curley.

"I suggested that I ask Chief Mullen to send in his retirement papers on a pension of $3,000 and that I could get Chief Mullen to do it.

"Mayor Curley stood up and looked me squarely in the eye and these are his own words:

"'No sir, Mr. Commissioner, Chief Mullen can get $2,000 and that is all. Chief Mullen has got to go.'

"I then told Chief Mullen to hurry his papers to my office and twenty-four hours before Mayor Curley cut the ax(sic), he had the retirement

WOMAN WRITER GIVES STUDY OF RANTOUL CASE

With the Rantoul case reopened by Mrs. Lois Burnett Rantoul's appeal for the custody of her children, and with the certainty of another bitter fight to retain their custody, the AMERICAN has secured a remarkable analysis of the tangle which involved the Rantouls and "Chippie" Rumrill, by Mrs. Lotta Bradburn Schick, a former Wellesley girl, and a prominent writer.

Mrs. Schick, with keen insight, strips the core of the controversy between Mr. and Mrs. Rantoul when she asks: "Did she find herself neglected first and then love another? Or did she first love another and then herself neglected?" Mrs. Schick was a spectator at the trial, and her analysis is a remarkable document.

By LOTTA BRADBURN SCHICK.

The Rantoul case was unique in several instances, and it interested me as it did so many others.

A man and woman fighting against each other—one cannot say "fighting each other," for the arguments now are made through third persons. It is an old, old story! Thousands have read—girls marrying, expecting bliss, and meeting misery.

It might be like just such another old case. But it wasn't. The woman confessed openly that she loved another man. More than that, she repeated again and again—almost everyone with whom she came in contact—that she loved this man, and with a heaven-born love!

The distinction from which such a love could have arisen was disputed, I believe. However, here, at any rate, was a man who believed it was of a heavenly source, and she derived comfort from it instead of misery. She reiterated the fact again and again, as something of which not to be ashamed, but to be reckoned with.

How did she cope with it? Did she struggle against such a love and cast it from her? Or is what we do with such an infatuation that counts. I do not know how much she struggled against it, but to the second she yielded. She has testified that she found Rumrill's love very sweet," and again "he kissed her and held her hands."

Kisses—the right sort—are a dame to no one; kisses—the wrong sort are a curse and a curse and a shame.

CONTRADICTIONS FASCINATE.

But it was the contradictions in the case that fascinated me.

A man, who confesses that he loved his wife, and still loves her, and yet who did not care enough for her love to do the little things he knew would keep it. She "wanted love and sympathy." Every woman does, as we all know. She got "abuse and neglect." What to neglect to one woman is only "a man's way" to another; what is abuse to a refined, cultured woman would be of little account to another; so I cannot judge of that. But sympathy is so easy to give; love once gone, so hard to regain; Mr. Rantoul now knows that.

Mrs. Rantoul surely believed herself abused and neglected—as maybe she was. And so she began to love another. Now the whole question reduced this: Did she begin to love another and THEN find herself abused and neglected? Or did she find herself neglected and then love another? All the facts lie in the answer to one or both of those questions. And only the Rantouls themselves can answer them.

Mrs. Rantoul's love is very real to her—there is no doubt of that. She sees no wrong in her love, for she would not "lie" so candidly. Few tell of their own wrong doing. And is a love that is kept "intellectual" a right love—is the physical side the only basis of a wrong love?

I wanted to see the principals of this case—to study at first hand people of every refinement and culture, who yet air their domestic affairs in court. Mr. Rantoul, if he abused her, knew that that abuse continued to a certain point, meant disaster; Mrs. Rantoul knew that that infatuation, if persisted in, would end in a court-room. And yet one or the other, or both, kept on.

FRANKNESS ATTRACTED.

Many women have fought for freedom before now; many women will do so again; but openly for the same cause as Mrs. Rantoul! It was her frankness, the "intellectual" love that pure need of the kisses, Mr. Rantoul's Puritanism, all in one, that attracted me.

Democrats in Legislature Uphold Party Honor in Canal Tolls Stand

The Democratic Caucus of the Massachusetts Legislature last night unanimously voted to support the resolutions introduced by William F. Doyle of the First Ward of Boston, opposing the repeal of the law exempting American coastwise ships from payment of tolls for the use of the Panama Canal.

The Democratic Caucus considered that it was merely upholding the honor of the party by its action.

Mr. Doyle rendered the party a service by giving it this opportunity to go on record in favor of loyalty to the party platform. There is no higher obligation of honor to which the representatives of a party can stand committed, whether in the National Congress or in the Legislature, than the promises made to the people before election by the party platform.

When Mr. Doyle's resolution comes up for a vote in the Legislature, it will be the duty of the Progressives and Republicans to consider the merits of the toll question. The Progressive stand in relation to the toll question just where the Democrats stand.

Their party platform also declares in favor of exempting the American coastwise ships from the payment of tolls.

Their great national leader, Theodore Roosevelt, gave us the canal. It was his statesmanship, courage and enterprise which gave us the territory through which the canal was built. It was his genius and organizing power which gave us a splendid organization which achieved the greatest engineering feat in the construction of the canal. His platform last year, recognizing the American special rights in the canal, was consistent with his whole record. The Progressives in the Massachusetts Legislature may be relied upon to be of help to preserve one of the greatest advantages of Roosevelt's greatest constructive works, the Panama Canal.

The Republicans also have shared in the glory of this canal. Most of it was constructed under President Taft, and the laws regulating its use were passed during President Taft's administration. President Taft signed the bill which exempted coastwise ships from the payment of tolls.

THIS QUESTION IS MORE THAN A PARTY QUESTION. If America yields to the British view in the canal we are in a worse position than we would be if some other nation had built the canal.

According to the British view, England can remit tolls charged against British ships passing the canal. But we cannot remit the tolls of our own ships.

If we accept the British view we are obliged to give foreign warships the same privileges which our own ships enjoy.

If the plain language of the treaty had put us under these disabilities concerning our control of a canal which we have built without the aid or encouragement of any other nation, we should be justified in repudiating a treaty so flagrantly unfair. But the language of the treaty does not admit of any such unfair limitation of our rights.

An incasual reading of the language of the treaty gives us all the authority which we claim for the effective control of the Panama Canal.

Nor will a true American be willing to SURRENDER FOR ALL TIME important rights in this great canal in order that our government may be graciously permitted by England to pursue a mistaken and shadowy policy in Mexico. Our present policy in Mexico ought to be abandoned.

It is a high price to pay for the right to pursue a bad policy if we have to give up the effective control of this canal, which is our pride and our hope.

The Democrats and Progressives are bound by their PARTY PLATFORM on this question, the Republicans are bound by their PATRIOTISM and by the history of their party on this question.

JOYCE FLAYS CURLEY IN HOT FIGHT IN 12TH

Former Senator Thomas M. Joyce, the original anti-Curley man, will hold two rallies tonight in Ward 16, in his fight for Congress, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Curley.

The first rally will be held at the corner of Dove and Blue Hill avenue at 8 p. m. The other rally will be at Mt. Vernon street and Dorchester avenue at 8:45.

In his opening speech at the corner of Broadway and Dorchester street, Monday night, Joyce pitched into Mayor Curley, saying:

"I wonder what kind of a reception your new chief magistrate, Reform Mayor James Michael Curley will get on Evacuation Day. As all I hear is true, and Curley thinks anything of his life, he ought to wear a diver's suit or an English coat of mail.

"For nine years the city employes in Ward 17 have paid their dues to the Tammany Club, dues used for Curley's own political advancement."

DEMOCRATS IN HOUSE FIGHT TOLLS REPEAL

Resolutions protesting against the levying of Panama Canal tolls on American coastwise shipping, likely to come before the House of Representatives late today, have been indorsed by the Democrats of the Massachusetts Legislature.

The resolutions were introduced by Representative William F. Doyle of East Boston. They declare a belief on the part of Massachusetts that the free tolls legislation of last year should not now be repealed at Washington.

The committee gave the East Boston Democrat a hearing, and then, in executive session, voted that the resolutions might be "admitted." All this was necessary because the time for the introduction of new business expired nearly two months ago.

Later in the day the Democrats of the Legislature met in solemn conclave. They were addressed by Governor Walsh, who declared the party expects every man to be true this year to every article of Democratic faith.

The Governor had scarcely left the reception room when somebody referred to the Baltimore platform and the fact that the President and his Secretary of State appear to have turned their backs on the declaration in that instrument in favor of an American canal "free of tolls to American coastwise shipping." The meeting then voted to support these resolutions in the Legislature.

Representative Doyle said early today over the telephone that his resolutions read substantially as follows:

WHEREAS, national honor, dignity and integrity demand that American coastwise vessels be given the privilege of passing through the Panama Canal exempt of any toll charges; and

WHEREAS, various nations had failed in their endeavors to build a canal between the Atlantic and the Pacific; and

WHEREAS, more than one hundred and fifty million American dollars have now been expended in the construction of the Panama Canal; therefore be it

RESOLVED, That the General Court of Massachusetts earnestly protests against the proposed repeal of the act exempting such American coastwise shipping.

"This American canal should be free to American ships," said Representative Doyle, "and I believe we should say so as the true representatives of Massachusetts sentiment."

papers of Chief Mullen and could not help himself in giving him an increased pension under the raise of pay given by Mayor Fitzgerald.

"Under no other commissioner but the one Mayor Curley has named, would chief Mullen had to leave the department.

"I believe that Chief Mullen is the best fire fighter, both in executive ability and in knowledge of fire fighting, in the country, bar none.

"He is better physically than two years ago and is one of the best disciplinarians in the country. I told the War Department officers last Summer when I was in Washington that they could come to Bostonand get ideas about discipline from Chief Mullen, and I meant it then and I mean it now.

ADVISED BY SULLIVAN.

"Every commissioner from Russell up to myself always leaned more or less on Chief Mullen regarding discipline.

"I resigned my office for I would not hold office on sufferance.

"During my administration, Mayor Fitzgerald never asked me to do one single thing that conflicted with my ideas of running the fire department. He gave me free rein. Politics had no place in the department, and I got out before politics got in.

"Mayor Curley, in my opinion, has been and is being ill-advised.

"I know absolutely that he is taking most all of his advice about the fire department from John A. Sullivan, who after criticising the Mayor is now his confidant.

"My friends advised me to stay even after Mayor Curley told me he was going to make a change, but was in no hurry to do it. I refused absolutely to have anything to do with his administration.

"DISGRACE TO THE CITY."

"I don't care to say anything about Chief Grady, who has been named as my successor, and do not criticise the Mayor for wanting his own heads of departments. That is but natural. But the way that Chief Mullen was used is almost a disgrace to the city.

"Mayor Curley in his economy and efficiency campaign has abolished the office of chief engineer and expert of the high pressure service of the city and discharged one of the best qualified men in the country, Clarence Goldsmith. That act alone speaks for the advice he is getting on some matters of city government."

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens so Naturally Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's treatment, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the musky mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive; besides, prevents dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair.

WHILE WILSON WATCHES, GIRLS BEHEAD HUERTA

Victoriana Huerta, provisional President of Mexico, has been beheaded.

The operation was performed with a shingle. Previously the dictator had been shot forty-seven times in the head and shoulders, and approximately a million shots had gone wide.

There were no fatalities on the attacking side. President Wilson was an interested spectator at the execution.

The Mexican problem was thus settled by a group of Wellesley College girls. They are students, these girls, of the plastic arts. After the soft snow the other day the girls erected a snow model of President Wilson, eight feet high.

While Wilson looked on, the girls set to work on Huerta, and he eventually appeared and cocked a rakish eye at Wilson.

Then with screams of real rage the girls bombarded the dictator with snowballs. Then the shingle appeared and his head rolled down hill.

Hope for Bald Heads

Well-Known Politician Nearly Bald Now Has Heavy Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A Western politician, well known on account of his baldness and his ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a heavy growth of hair, many of his friends did not know him, and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the growth of my hair to the following simple recipe, which any lady or gentleman can mix at home. To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of Bay Rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of Glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair, but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded, gray hair, and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost, and mixed at home." Adv.

Rheumatism — Successfully Overcome in the Tissues by a Searching Remedy

If you are down with rheumatism; if your feet chilled, are choked with rheum, have a cough, or your skin is pimpled and irritated with rash, eczema or any other blood disorder, just remember that all the ills of life come from impure blood. And you can easily get rid of bad blood through sweat, as a bath, by using S. S. S. There is no need for anyone to be despondent over the illness of blood impurities, for matter how many they attack the system, or how unsightly becomes the sore, just remember, there is one ingredient in S. S. S. that so stimulates the circulation throughout the body that each part selects its own essential nutriment from the blood.

This means that all decay, all breaking down of the tissues, is checked and repair work begins. S. S. S. has such a specific influence on all local evils as to protect their radical welfare and afford a proper relative assistance to each other. More attention is being given to scientific medicine than ever before and S. S. S. is the highest achievement in this line. For many years people often speak highly of Peruna, Aromatic Cascara, Pluvica, Catharlax and Dopo as remedies for blood sickness, but note the pure vegetable S. S. S. is their safeguard.

You can get S. S. S. in any drug store, but insist upon having it. And you should take no chance by permitting anyone to recommend substitutes. And if your blood condition is such that you would like to consult a specialist freely, address Medical Dept., The Swift Specific Co., 201 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga.

MILITANTS TRY TO RESCUE MRS. PANKHURST

LONDON, March 10.—Fighting desperately against her transfer from Glasgow to this place, Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst was today secretly hustled to a wayside station in Lanarkshire and started on her journey to a London trial.

Great secrecy was maintained in getting the militant leader to the railway station as there were early signs of renewed disturbances and an attempt to rescue the woman over whom the militant riot in St. Andrew's Hall, Glasgow, centred last night.

Anticipating the arrival of Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst detachments of women were sent to all the railway stations at noon. They were ordered to act as pickets and to endeavor to rescue their leader from the police upon her arrival. If the police guard were too strong orders were given that the arrested leader should be followed so that her whereabouts would be known.

While vigorous efforts were directed toward the rescue of Mrs. Pankhurst, other militants opened a new line of attack in their fight for votes.

Shortly after the opening of the National Gallery today a party of young women entered and began looking at the collection. They carried catalogues and guide books as though they were tourists. When in front of the "Venus" of Diego Velasques, a masterpiece which cost $225,000, one of the women drew a hatchet from her pocket and began slashing at the glass with which covered the face of the canvas. Before guards arrived she had smashed the glass and badly damaged the picture. She was then arrested.

At the police station the woman was identified as Mary Richardson, a well-known member of the Women's Social and Political Union, who was recently charged with arson at Hampton Court. She was held for trial, without bail.

The secretary of the National Gallery told Scotland Yard officials that the selling value of the painting had depreciated from $50,000 to $75,000 by the mutilation.

So grave was the outrage considered that Premier Asquith addressed the House of Commons upon it this afternoon. He declared that the government regarded it "a most serious matter."

Mother Stanislaus Tells of Recovery

Throat trouble, the continued coughs and colds, often seriously affect the lungs. If you have not found any improvement from the treatment you have tried, investigate the many reports showing benefits, and, in numerous cases, complete recoveries, brought about by the use of Eckman's Alterative. This is a medicine for Throat and Lung Troubles, that's safely been for more than fifteen years. Read this case:—

Convent of St. Anne, Sanford, Fla.

"Gentlemen: In February, 1911, four doctors examined my throat and pronounced the necessity of an operation. Having heard of Peruna, A. S. Mull, Muthertown, of the Sisters of St. Francis, whose I was visiting, of Eckman's Alterative, I determined to a last resort to try it. After taking one or five bottles large pieces of diseased tissue came away. I continued the Alterative, to my gratefull and duty to of it in me that I was restored to perfect health. I would be glad to write or talk to any person who may have a doubt about it. I would like them to see and hear from my own lips, if they so desire, all I could say of it."

(Signed) MOTHER M. STANISLAUS.

Eckman's Alterative has been proven by many years' test to be most effective for severe Throat and Lung Affections, Bronchitis, Bronchial Asthma, Stubborn Colds and in subduing the system. Contains no harmful poisons or habit-forming drugs. Sold by leading druggists. Write the Eckman Laboratory, Philadelphia, Pa. for candid testimony of recoveries and additional evidence.

MRS. MEYERS' SUIT FOR DIVORCE STIRS WELLESLEY SOCIETY

Mrs Ilione Meyers of Wellesley Farms, seeking a divorce, and George W. Lidstone, formerly the Meyers' chauffeur, whose wife sued Mrs. Meyers two years ago in a $25,000 action for alienation.

Society friends of Mrs. Ilione Woodbury Meyers of Wellesley Farms, who has just filed a divorce suit against President Hiram B. Meyers of the P. A. Field Shoe Company, concluded today that the case is an outcome of the alienation suit brought against Mrs. Meyers by Mrs. Anna E. Lidstone, wife of the Meyers' chauffeur, two years ago. Mrs. Lidstone sued Mrs. Meyers for $25,000. The jury disagreed.

There was speculation today also, whether Mrs. Lidstone's suit would be reopened, as it has not been definitely settled.

Mrs. Meyers filed her divorce petition at Dedham. She accuses Mr. Meyers of cruel and abusive treatment and desertion. She seeks the custody of her two girls, Ilione and Murial, aged fifteen and seven years old respectively. She has taken action to attach her husband's property in $50,000.

TESTIFIED FOR WIFE.

Hiram B. Meyers' address is given as No. 22 Bluegrass street. At the time of the Lidstone alienation suit he testified he was living at the Boston Art Club. His wholesale shoe business is located at No. 135 Lincoln and No. 69 Bedford streets.

An interesting fact in connection with Mrs. Meyers' accusations against her husband is that he was the principal witness for Mrs. Meyers when she was defending herself from Mrs. Lidstone's alienation suit. Mr. Meyers swore that, although he was not living with his wife, he still cherished her and was testifying in her behalf. He expressed belief that his wife was innocent of the charge of having stolen the affections of George W. Lidstone, their chauffeur.

Mrs. Meyers was formerly Miss Ilione Woodbury of Dorchester. She went to Dorchester High School and Wellesley College and was married in 1897 to Hiram B. Meyers, who was associated with her father in the wholesale shoe business. They established a costly home at Wellesley Farms.

FILED ALIENATION SUIT.

In 1907 a Vermont girl named Anna Chase came to Waltham and was married in 1909 to George W. Lidstone from Prince Edward Island. In the Spring of 1910 Lidstone, who had been to an automobile school, hired with Hiram B. Meyers as the first chauffeur for their new car.

In September, 1911, Mrs. Lidstone filed her alienation suit against Mrs. Meyers, and it was tried the next May. Mrs. Lidstone testified she had trailed her husband when he began to stay away nights, that she had watched the Meyers home for eleven hours one night, and that her married life had been happy until Lidstone went to work for the Meyers family. In her declaration Mrs. Lidstone accused Mrs. Meyers of enticing Lidstone away from his own home at night.

'WORLD GOING TO HADES,' SAYS BILLY SUNDAY

The conflict among Boston ministers as to whether or not they will invite Evangelist Billy Sunday to come to Boston waxed hotter than ever today at word of the amazing reception received last night in New York.

Speaking in Carnegie Hall, he faced an audience that filled every inch of space and that overflowed in a dense crowd which blocked Fifty-seventh street from curb to curb.

In Boston the Rev. Dr. Charles Parkhurst is the leader of those opposed to inviting Sunday here. The Rev. W. J. Brant, secretary of the International Reform League, leads the pro-Sunday forces.

SERMON A SIZZLER.

Sunday's sermon was a sizzler, shot through with the stinging slang of baseball and the streets, and shoved straight home to every man and woman who listened. He talked so fast no stenographer could touch him—but here are a few of the things the reporters caught when he slowed down:

"When I started to preach, friends, I got a dictionary and strung together a lot of big words that'd keep a Greek professor's jaw a-squeaking for a week—and my sermon didn't get over the plate. I failed.

"I thought it over for a while, and then I said: 'Oh, Lo-o-rd! I've had it doped out all wrong. The devil's the guy I'm after, and I can't get him with big words.' So I loaded the old oratorical gun with rock salt, red pepper, peeane, aconita, saltpetre, tacks, dynamite and barbed wire, and I let fly.

"And when I let fly the devil took it on the run, and every time I shoot that charge now he's lookin' for a hole."

"BREAKIN' SPEED LIMITS."

"The world is going to hell so fast that it's breakin' all speed limits. If you would only stand up and profess Christ and say, 'Thy will, not my will, be done,' the demons would bank their fires, hell would be for rent and the devil'd be in the hospital by the Fourth of July.

"But there'll be more of you lined up in the front of a theatre looking at a leg show than there will be lined up near the front of a church.

"If there weren't churches there wouldn't be a decent man or woman left here in six months, and your real estate wouldn't be worth twenty-five cents on the dollar. You'd better keep your churches and make them real churches, not social clubs.

"The world is not disgusted with Jesus Christ. But it is disgusted with the showers of spiritual cocaine that your ministers are dousing you with."

Charges Liner Left His Ship to Sink

Captain George W. Murphy of the abandoned schooner S. G. Haskell, today at his home in Malden, will file a serious charge against a liner which hove to within two miles of his sinking schooner with her distress signals plainly displayed, and sailed away again without rendering assistance.

BEWARE! NEW YORK

For Billy Sunday Says

YOU ARE DOOMED

Here are the chief reasons why New York, according to Evangelist Billy Sunday, is on the "downward toboggan":

The city is bossed by a "personal devil" who has two chief residences, the saloon and "society."

This devil peeps out from the slits in what by common courtesy are called "skirts."

He revels in exaggerated all-night tangoes danced not for the rhythm of dancing, but solely for sex sensation.

He is a constant habitue of the city's all-night revels of all sorts.

Liquor is his first aid.

Through the work of the personal devil and liquor laws not enforced crime flourishes, and the people are being ruined.

There are so many people in the city that the devil gets lots of practice in his work—and he is practicing all the time.

New York thinks too much of sociological reforms and not enough of real religion.

Its residents are so engrossed in themselves and in having a good time that they haven't any time to think about God.

The only hope for the city lies in accepting religion of the good old-fashioned type, based on absolute belief in God.

Prohibition is the first step to be taken.

The quickest way to bring about prohibition is to grant woman suffrage.

He was reputed to be worth $75,000.

Sulzer Loses Salary.

LIFE-SAVERS GETTING USED TO SHOVELING

Here is the complete list of city employes ordered by Mayor Curley to take a pick and shovel and get to work—or resign. The men were janitors, life-savers, gymnasium instructors and other, and the Mayor decided they would be more valuable razing the hill in Franklin Field than raising the ante in the back room of the gymnasiums.

There are forty-two men affected by the two rider. The thirty-eight who went to work with pick and shovel are: John J. Scannell, Philip M. Powers, Patrick F. O'Melia, James Russell, Eugene F. Suicide's Grief Is Revealed by Letters

Grief over the death of her cousin, George Brewster, who shot and killed himself at Dexter, Me., three weeks ago, was today said to have been the motive for the suicide of Miss Helen P. Gilman, who was found poisoned by gas in her apartment at No. 329 Main street, Medford. Letters, containing checks for her creditors and others addressed to the chief of police and relatives, disclosed the motive.

Miss Gahm to Wed Dorchester Man

Tobacco Habit Easily Conquered

A well-known New Yorker of wide experience, has written a book telling how the tobacco or snuff habit may be easily and quickly banished in three days with full guarantee of benefit.

The health improves wonderfully after the nicotine poison is out of the system. Cold hands, tranquil sleep, clear eyes, normal appetite, good digestion, manly vigor, strong memory and a general gain in efficiency are among the many benefits reported. No more of that nervous feeling; no more need of pipe, cigar, cigarette or chewing tobacco to satisfy the morbid desire. The author, Edw. J. Woods, 354 Sixth Ave., 854 S, New York City, will mail his book free on application to anyone.

Winthrop Voters Have Fire Scare

VOTE FOR MOST NOTED WOMEN IN WORLD, AND WIN $100 PRIZES

Who ARE the six most distinguished women in the world?

It is hard to imagine a wider range of opinion than is being expressed on this question. The discussion was brought about when it was announced that the Board of Women Managers of the Panama-Pacific Exposition would invite the six most distinguished women in the world to be guests at the great San Francisco exposition next year.

The discussion immediately assumed such proportions that the Boston AMERICAN cares $100 in prizes to the person who can make up the best representative list of celebrated women.

SPECIAL IMPORTANCE WILL BE ATTACHED TO THE SELECTION OF A REPRESENTATIVE OF NEW ENGLAND IN THIS LIST OF ELIGIBLES.

Any reader may submit any number of lists of six names, nominating the world's six most distinguished women.

The names must be of the living, as the Panama-Pacific board of women managers desires to entertain six such women and has asked for suggestions.

Write on one side of the paper: Give six names Alone—briefly—your reasons for your selections. You may take your names from any source at hand.

There is a world-wide field to draw from, and it is suggested that all arts and crafts, philanthropies and scientific possibilities, should be considered in making up a list.

Each name submitted will be given one vote. The six women receiving the highest number of votes will be the formal list with which yours will be compared.

First prize will be $35; second, $25; third, $15; fourth, $10; and fifth, sixth and seventh, $5 each.

In the event of a tie the sum will be equally divided.

Acid Stomachs Are Dangerous

Common Sense Advice by a Distinguished Specialist.

"Acid" stomachs are dangerous because acid irritates and inflames the delicate lining of the stomach, thus hindering and preventing the proper action of the digestion and leading to probably nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble from which people suffer. Ordinary medicines and medicinal treatment are useless in such cases for they leave the source of the trouble, the acid in the stomach, undisturbed and active. The acid must be neutralized and its formation prevented before the best thing for this purpose is a simple antacid, taken in a little warm or cold water after eating, which not only neutralizes the acid, but also prevents the fermentation from which acidity is developed. Foods which ordinarily cause great distress may be eaten with impunity if the meal is followed with a little bisurated magnesia, which can be obtained from any druggist, and should always be kept handy.

HEAVY LOSS FOR REBELS AT TORREON

EL PASO, Tex., March 10.—Constitutionalist troops sent by General Villa to open the campaign for the capture of Torreon have met with a crushing defeat, according to advices received today from Ciudad Porforio Diaz. They state that many Mexican rebels were killed, 486 wounded and 150 taken prisoners.

The federal forces were commanded by General Benjamin Argumedo Ortega, whose failure to capture Ojinaga resulted in his being sent to the rear when General Villa took command in the attack of the town.

Early on Sunday a small force of Federals, led by General Ricardo Pena, was beaten by General Ortega's men and Pena was compelled to fall back on Torreon.

The victorious rebels pressed toward that city and after a running fight of several hours were outflanked by General Argumedo's troops, which had been sent out to help Pena.

Ortega's force was caught between two fires when Pena's men rallied and was cut to pieces.

General Villa declared today that he would hold as a prisoner Luis Terraza, Jr., until he received the second $250,000 required to make up the young man's ransom of $500,000. The rebel commander said that Terraza would not be executed, but that the money must be forthcoming before he is freed.

DEATH LIST IN ST. LOUIS FIRE MAY REACH 40

ST. LOUIS, March 10.—The death list in the Missouri Athletic Club fire may reach forty.

Firemen working their way into the ruins slowly today had removed and identified the bodies of nine men and one woman. Three more bodies could be seen deeper in the maps of brick and stone. Officials of the Missouri Athletic Club were still unable to account for twenty-four men who were in the building at the time the fire was discovered at 2 a. m. Monday. Throughout the night the work of seeking the dead continued by the glare of arc lights.

Firemen today reached several bodies near an elevator shaft. A dangerous wall forced the firemen to stop work temporarily.

A large crowd stood about the burned building during the night. Among the watchers were relatives and friends of missing men waiting for the next bodies to be lifted from under charred timbers and fallen granite blocks, hoping that each new find would not be the body of one they had missed, yet anxious to dispel the doubt as to the fate of those that had not been accounted for.

All of the injured men who are being cared for in hospitals and hotels were improving today. None of them will die.

Fire was discovered in the ruins of the building along the Washington avenue wall early today. Diggers were ordered off the ruins while experts made certain that the front wall of the building would not collapse.

How to Remove Hairs from Chin, Lip or Cheek

(Beauty Culture)

It is an easy matter to banish every trace of objectionable hair and leave the skin soft and smooth and free from blemish. Just get a small, original package of powdered delatone and with water mix enough paste to cover the hairy surface. Let this remain on the skin for 2 or 3 minutes, then remove, wash the skin and the hairs are gone. No failure will result from this treatment, but be certain it is delatone you get.

THE LITTLE CAFE

Book and Lyrics by C. M. S. McLellan — Music by Ivan Caryll

Author and Composer of "The Pink Lady" and "Oh! Oh! Delphine"

THE EXHILARATING PUNCH

of "The Little Cafe" has intoxicated all New York for the past 7 months. With its sorcerous effect, its atmosphere of gaiety, its sparkling, champagne-like melody all served so brilliantly to tempt the jaded appetite, where can one spend three happier hours. Its intimacy with gay Paree, its charming femininity, its quips and cranks, its unflagging air of youth and abandon, transform this particular "Little Cafe" into an elysium.

"Where the nights are filled with music,
Where the cares that infest the day
Fold up their tents like the Arabs,
And as silently steal away."

SUFFRAGE DAY IN SENATE; DEMOCRATS REMINDED OF PLEDGE

The keynote of Governor Walsh's address to the Democrats of the Legislature was "economy."

* * *

After that, the Governor made it plain that Democrats in this Legislature will be expected by the Democrats who put them there to stand by the party pledges. They are to vote to submit the equal suffrage question to the people; not because they believe in suffrage, but because they believe in the people.

* * *

In Massachusetts, everybody knows that, by "initiative and Referendum" is meant that the people shall have the right first to propose, or "initiate," legislation, and second to have legislative proposals "referred" to them.

* * *

With the Democrats of the Commonwealth looking on, it will be politically unhealthy for Democrats to stray this year from the party platform. On the hill town trolley proposition last year, it was set up for some gentlemen, and with some success, that they "didn't know it was loaded." Certainly that excuse will not pass muster this year.

* * *

There was every indication that today would be big and important in State House committee rooms. Before the Committee on Public Service, the veterans of the Spanish War pressed their claim for a credit or bonus of 5 per cent. in civil service examinations. The Civil Service Association indulged in its favorite indoor sport of opposing this demand of the boys of '98.

* * *

This is "Suffrage Afternoon" in the State Senate of Massachusetts. According to the Senate Calendar the question before the Senate is a resolve "to provide for an amendment of the Constitution striking the word 'male' from the qualifications of voters."

* * *

The Public Health Committee gives most of the day to tuberculosis questions.

* * *

Several bills calling for the reorganization of the State Board of Education are up before the committee on police. Here, too, a fight was on the cards.

* * *

Banks and Banking hears a bill calling for the "incorporation of stock exchanges" and the Committee on Agriculture a bill providing for the "protection of birds by licensing cats."

* * *

Governor Walsh is not more determined about anything than about his resolve that the State Board of Labor and Industries must be reorganized. Chairman James A. Lowell and his friends can have a battle with the Governor if they insist upon it, but in the end the Chief Executive will have his way.

* * *

The Governor tells his friends that the make-up of this Board is merely another example of how the wage-earners of the Commonwealth have been deceived.

* * *

The purpose of the legislation which frames the Boston bills, before the Governor says, he believes to have been splendid. When it came to selecting the personnel, however, the story was a different one.

* * *

Enforcement of the labor laws was turned over to this Board, which is at present made up of one capable assistable attorney, a manufacturer, a wage-earner, a housewife and a college professor.

* * *

The contention of Governor Walsh is that there isn't "heart" enough in this organization. When he found a provision of the law demanding that one member of the Board must be either a physician or a sanitary engineer, he promptly sent for Chairman Lowell and asked for a resignation.

* * *

Governor Walsh did NOT demand the resignation of Chairman Lowell. He told Lowell then either Lowell or Professor Crook of Amherst would have to step aside for a physician. Lowell thought it over for a few days and then declined to resign.

* * *

"There is such a lack of confidence in your Board on the part of the working people, Mr. Lowell," the Governor said, "that I may say to you that I should prefer your resignation to that of Professor Crook. But I must have the place occupied by one of you."

* * *

Governor Walsh is particularly displeased with the statement in the leading Stand Pat organ that his desire to overhaul the State Board of Labor and Industries is a "drive for the jobs." The employes of the Board are under civil service.

* * *

The Stand Pat organ probably did not know that the only Democratic criticisms made of the Governor are to the effect that he isn't interested half enough in the question of places in the public service. Republican and Democratic newspapers, however, have alike commended his appointments up to this time.

* * *

There is no reason to believe that the Governor's nominee for the State Board of Labor and Industries will be other than a physician of the highest standing. The chances are that this nominee will be picked for his humane qualities rather than because he is on the State record for autopsies.

* * *

The Governor will say a few words this evening at the annual dinner of the Veterans of the Spanish War Association, in the "Heart of the Commonwealth." He is likely to speak his mind there about some of the courts who engage in partisan politics.

* * *

Some time since, His Excellency expressed his thoughts on judges who snap at the attorneys who appear before them.

* * *

One of these days somebody in high authority will talk plain English about the ruffians of the bar who browbeat witnesses out of their "innocent hysterandeer" classification.

* * *

Language that would put a face on the bar-room floor is used every day in some of the lower courts by men who would not dare to use it outside except over the telephone. And there's a way to stop it, which appears still to be the big test.

* * *

The Hon. Samuel Leland Powers, picked by United States Senator Weeks and his followers to run for Congress next November against Congressman John Joseph Mitchell, Democrat, will be sixty-six years old in October. Mr. Powers, however, is still spry. His campaign manager has declined upon to be not only picturesque but peppery.

* * *

His best campaign committee will be made up of all the Dartmouth men in the district, for, according to history, he has to say to the contrary, "Sam" Powers is the father of the college up at Hanover, and the inventor of what is known as the "Dartmouth spirit."

* * *

John Mitchell's hardest job, or the hardest job of his loyal friends, will be to smooth out a Democratic ill feeling in the district. No other Democrat than Congressman Mitchell embarrassed by a like number of candidates for postoffices and such. It is quite enough to say that when there are three candidates for a postoffice two of them must necessarily be turned down, but it is one thing to say this in a smoking car conversation with a chance acquaintance and another thing to tell it to two disappointed Massachusetts candidates.

* * *

At all events the smile on the face of Republican managers in the Thirteen District is caused not by any belief that the Progressives are "coming to their senses"—which, interpreted by Republicans means the return of the Stand Pat Party—but by the prevalent belief that Mr. Mitchell is "in bad" with the powerful Democrats here and there in the district.

* * *

It is hard to believe that in a little more than one year Congressman Mitchell has lost his personal charm and wonderful popularity. He will do well to get into his district at the earliest opportunity and to be there as much as possible from now until the big day.

MISS ANGLIN SCORES IN 'AS YOU LIKE IT'

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

It is doubtful if Shakespeare and his plays were ever tricked so swiftly through an evening's performance as that which Margaret Anglin directed and acted at the Cort Theatre last evening. It was like taking Shakespeare on the run, except that you lost nothing by the process. And you were forced to concede that, after all, the modern stage is well able to treat William and his classics intelligently, without keeping everybody up until midnight. In that respect Miss Anglin scored heavily, for "As You Like It" ran a merry course through the evening to everybody's delight.

It was the Livingston Platt system of production that enabled Miss Anglin to do "As You Like It" within the reasonable limit of time set by play-goers who live beyond the city limits, and who take their drama with one eye on a timetable. It was exactly as Miss Anglin had promised —there were no tedious waits. The play moved from one scene to another with a precision and speed that enabled Mr. Platt and his system to keep faith with their promise of an adequate production and no delays. It was at least more than we have ever received from Mr. Shakespeare in his former visits to Boston.

ARTISTIC TREATMENT.

While "As You Like It" may have lacked some of the heavy settings that the play-going public has been trained to receive in its considerations of the classics, the performance last evening was not at all lacking in the artistic touches that make the English classics stand up themselves as dramatic entertainment. You may have studied more elaborate and cumbersome scenery, but you never had a more smoothly running performance, or a more refined and artistic treatment of "As You Like It."

Miss Anglin carried herself splendidly through the gay and picturesque scenes allotted to Rosalind, and proved herself thoroughly capable of taking herself seriously, and impressing it upon her public. Rosalind was a flighty young woman who needed a Margaret Anglin to give her a substantial standing in the community in which she moved. And you may be sure that Miss Anglin did all that for the role. She made her extremely human and easy to understand, which is all that anyone has a right to expect from these late revivals of Shakespeare.

That Miss Anglin is a comedienne with an artistic sense of comedy values was made apparent from the start, for the played Rosalind with an apparently profound knowledge of the role's requirements. She was in complete command of herself and the role during the entire performance.

THOUGHTFUL STUDY.

The Orlando who wrestled himself into Rosalind's favor was mentally played by Fedro de Cordoba, who displayed a full measure of skill in acting. He read his lines intelligently and looked the part, which is all that could be said of any one who was assuming the same task. Fuller Mellish, in the two roles of Jaques and Amiens, directed his part of the performance like a veteran and left an impression that was distinctly favorable.

"As You Like It" was the third of Miss Anglin's productions of the Shakespearean plays at the Cort Theatre, and was a thoughtful study of the classical drama. The evening she will give "Twelfth Night."

'Belle of New York' at the National

Miss Nellie Daly and Walter S. Wills scored several hits in character sketches and dancing at the National Theatre in the musical comedy success "The Belle of New York." In the cast are Taylor Williams, Hudson Freeborn, Stephen Paul, Walter S. Wills, Augustus Minton, Glen Cushing, Arthur Conrad, Maude Drury, May Emory, Nellie Daly, Grace Wickham and Georgia Campbell.

The Misses Cameron, Gustin, Ferry, Foster, Bowen, Carson, Heller, White, Carey, Osborn, Moran, Nelson, Paris, Mascott, Harris, Hunter and Messrs. Drury, Brennan, Cohan, Pollack, Meyers, Mantell and Evans make up the chorus.

Aside from the musical numbers and chorus the impersonation of the Salvation Army belle as portrayed by Miss Georgia Campbell; the German lunatic as characterized by Arthur Conrad, which with the clever acting of Taylor Williams and Hudson Freeborn gives a tone to the production that leaves everybody in good humor.

'THE MIKADO' REVIVED AT THE SHUBERT

"The Flowers that Bloom in the Spring, tra-la," burst forth anew last night at the Shubert, where that perennial favorite, "The Mikado," had a most sumptuous revival at the hands of the famous Gilbert and Sullivan Festival Company. A large audience welcomed back the familiar characters and tuneful melodies with such enthusiastic applause that De-Wolf Hopper, who headed the all-star cast, had to round out the delightful evening with one of his famous funny speeches of appreciation. Hopper was at his best, and his interpretation of the comic opera masters' original humor was augmented by his own delightful idiosyncrasies, so that altogether the occasion was truly a side-splitting one.

Others who contributed most ably to the joy of the audience were Alice Brady, Gladys Caldwell, Sara M. Edwards, Maude Mordaunt, Arthur Aldridge, Arthur Cunningham, John C. Thomas and Herbert Waterous. Every one of these is a Boston favorite, and all were accorded a reception worthy of their splendid performance. While the cast is composed of a large number of individual stars, all worked so harmoniously together that the rendition of the opera was a most finished one.

The scenic effects were superb, the orchestration complete, the chorus an unusually large and well-balanced one, and altogether the performance was as satisfactory as the most exacting critic could require.

In perfecting this revival of famous favorite comic operas, the Shuberts and William A. Brady have spared no expense to make each production truly sumptuous, and have gathered together not only actors of supreme ability, but a company whose individual members all can sing. The acme of real music is therefore added to the genuine fun that pervades each production.

"The Mikado" will be repeated tonight for the benefit of the large number who were unable to gain admittance last night, and tomorrow the delightful "Pinafore" will be given both afternoon and evening.

NEW DISCOVERY QUICKLY ENDS KIDNEY AND BLADDER TROUBLES

Chronic Sufferers Find Relief After Few Doses Are Taken.

If you are bothered with backache—or rheumatism, have disagreeable, annoying bladder or urinary disorders to contend with—or suffer with any other of the many miseries that come from kidneys, here is a guaranteed remedy you can depend upon, no matter what else may have failed to cure you.

It is a positive fact that the new discovery Croxone, promptly overcomes such diseases. It is the most wonderful remedy ever made for ridding the system of uric acid, removing the cause and curing the troubles.

It sinks right in and clears out the stopped-up kidneys and makes them filter and sift out all the poisonous waste matter from the blood. It neutralizes and dissolves the uric acid that lodges in the joints and muscles, causing rheumatism; soothes and heals the delicate linings of the bladder; and puts the kidneys and urinary organs in a clean, strong, healthy condition.

More than a few doses of Croxone are seldom required to relieve even the obstinate, long-standing cases, while it cures the most annoying forms of kidney, bladder trouble and rheumatism in a surprisingly short time.

You will find Croxone entirely different from all other remedies. There is nothing else on earth like it. It is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results. An original package costs but a trifle at any first-class drug store. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give the desired results the very first time you use it.

'BUNTY PULLS THE STRINGS' IN BOSTON AGAIN

"Bunty Pulls the Strings" delighted a large audience at a return engagement in Boston Theatre last night. The plot deals with the tangled affairs of Tamas Biggar, father of Bunty. She, in love with Weelum Sprunt, the elder of the church, "pulls the strings," releasing her father from many entanglements, and finally wins over the entire village folk.

As Bunty, Miss Molly Pearson is the same quaint, sweet and pleasing little miss of a year ago. There was nothing stagey about her acting. Her dry wit brought bursts of applause. William Lennon, as Weelum Sprunt, was made for the part. The pleasure of watching him grew as the play advanced. He smiled but once, but that once meant much. It was a smile that caught everybody and an outburst of laughter greeted it. His part was a difficult one, but he handled himself admirably.

Polly Griffin as Susie Simpson was disappointed in love. Her only chance for matrimony was lost when she accused her intended with robbing her. She handled a most difficult part with ease. As Helen Duncan, Mabel Stanton shared honors with Miss Griffin.

J. E. McGregor as Tammas Biggar gave a true interpretation of an impulsive, determined Scotch father. His facial expressions approached perfection, while his display of temper was seriously realistic. As his son, Hugh, James Finlayson, and Miss Violet Dale as Teenie Dunlop furnish many humorous situations. Others in the act where Clara Coleman as Maggie Mercer, James Emmett as Dan Birrell, the policeman, and Hudson Liston as Jeems Gibbs.

TIP TOP BILL THIS WEEK AT B. F. KEITH'S

There is a big show with plenty of fun at B. F. Keith's Theatre this week. The feature is Jesse L. Lasky's "Red Heads." James B. Carson and the original cast of favorites including Eleanor Sutter, Hellen Dubois, Dorothea Sadler and Stewart Jackson, and the famous chorus of titian-haired beauties. "My Latest Creation," the famous red headed models appeared in gorgeous costumes.

Sallie Fisher, the musical comedy favorite, made her Boston vaudeville debut in a program of original songs; Morris Cronin and his odd troupe of dwarfs and sprites have a unique electrical specialty; the Christian Caupolican, the Indian orator and singer, was heard in song and speech; the Pederson brothers, wonderful Swedish acrobats, returned after a long absence abroad with their sensational and original Pederson trick; the Rempell sisters and company offered a two-scene playlet of child life, called "When We Grow Up," and Charles Thompson gave a novelty entertainment.

It's an all around tip top bill, amusing from start to finish.

Castle Sq. Players Present Strong Bill

The struggle of a young man to overcome a weak character so that he may be worthy of the girl he loves is capably interpreted by Donald Meek in "Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace," the bill at the Castle Square Theatre this week. Mary Young appears as Mrs. Gorringe, who lost the necklace while visiting at the home of Colonel Jardine.

William P. Carleton appeared as Captain Mowbray, Donald Meek as David Cairn, and Walter Walling gave a fine interpretation of the part of Colonel Jardine.

Doris Olsson found a warm place in the hearts of the audience as Isobel, daughter of Mrs. Jardine, in love with David Cairn. Florence Shirley, as Vickey, another daughter of Mrs. Jardine, and Anna Paystone was seen in the character of Miss Potts, a spinster. Frederick Ormonde appears as Mr. Pernican, a detective. Several of the women in the cast wore colored wigs.

MRS. WILLIAMS' LONG SICKNESS

Elkhart, Ind.:—"I suffered for fourteen years from organic inflammation, female weakness, pain and irregularities. The pains in my side were intensified by walking or standing on my feet and I had such awful bearing down feelings, was depressed in spirits and became thin and pale with dull, heavy eyes. I had six doctors from whom I received only temporary relief. I decided to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial and after the Sanative Wash. I have now used the remedies for four months and cannot express my thanks for what they have done for me.

"If these lines will be of any benefit you have my permission to publish them."—Mrs. SADIE WILLIAMS, 455 James Street, Elkhart, Indiana.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from native roots and herbs, contains no narcotic or harmful drugs. It has held the record of being the most successful remedy for female ills we know of, and thousands of voluntary testimonials on file in the Pinkham laboratory at Lynn, Mass., seem to prove this fact.

In the Pinkham Laboratory are files containing hundreds of thousands of letters from women seeking health—many of them openly state over their own signatures that they have regained their health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound; and in some cases it has saved them from surgical operations. Why don't you try it?

The Hunting Spiders,

A Fascinating and Instructive Nature Study Prepared by Professor R. L. Ditmars, Curator of Reptiles, New York Zoological Society.

CHAPTER I.

THE dread tarantula and other species of literature's bloodthirsty "Hunting Spiders" have revealed the hitherto deep secrets of their daily lives at home and abroad stalking their prey and giving battle to enemies.

What humanity in general could never hope to learn about these small but fearsome creatures has been made clear by the watchful, patient and scientific and his ever-ready motion picture camera. On the magic screen you see the tarantula, for example, the large as a small door-mat and fearsomely active and pugnacious.

These belong to the spider tribe which, because of their marvelous intelligence, energy, fighting spirit and devotion to their young, H. G. Wells, the English novelist of prophecy, predicts will some day overrun the world, developing into a species of super-men who will dominate all other living creatures.

When you watch with the eyes of the motion picture camera that furry horror, the South American tarantula, going about his usual business, such theories as this do not seem so very far-fetched after all. This species of hunting spider has already reached the stage where small birds and reptiles are at his mercy. He is afraid of nothing. He will leap as high as a man's knee and inflict a poisonous bite that puts the man out of the battle.

All of the various species of hunting spiders—those which spin no webs, but stalk their prey—have fierce and dominating natures, and the most astounding intelligence. They are not troubled by the slightest scruples of conscience, yet they devotedly sacrifice their own lives in the interest of the future of their race.

CHAPTER II.

The home of the tarantula family is a tunnel or tavern upon the ground, comparatively as rigid as a concreted tunnel under the Hudson River. It is lined and reinforced with silk from father and mother tarantula, which they delight to utilize in spinning foolish webs, like common or garden spiders.

You see Father Tarantula coming home from a foraging expedition, maybe dragging after him by one furry leg a brace of crickets or grasshoppers. At the mouth of the tunnel he stops cautiously and reconnoiters. Perhaps some other head of a tarantula family has taken advantage of his absence to secure an apartment with more modern conveniences. Father Tarantula pokes a long foreleg into the opening, and seems to listen warily. As no enemy leaps out at him, he walks in and reports the results of the chase to Mother Tarantula.

Mother Tarantula has been very busy starting a new brood by laying about two hundred shiny, pearl-like eggs, which she is engaged in enveloping in a tough silken cocoon. The last being replenished with the products of his chase, Father Tarantula turns to and helps her with the cocoon.

For Mother Tarantula this is a tragic task, for by the time these eggs are hatched, and the little tarantulas are big enough to find for themselves—six weeks for the hatching and another month or more carrying her brood about on her furry back—the chances are that she will die of anxiety and over-exertion. Every moment until the eggs are hatched she hugs the precious cocoon tightly to her breast, carrying it about with her, even fighting fierce battles thus handicapped.

When warrior tarantulas chance to meet on one of their public highways, the spectacle is one to make the stoutest human heart beat faster. Savage and alert, the enemies back slowly away from each other, rearing and threatening horribly with their sharp-clawed, hairy forelegs. If, finally they leap at each other, a dozen hairy legs interlaced, mandibles seeking a mortal hold—you feel sure that you will have bad dreams that night.

If the warriors make up their minds that there is nothing in particular to fight about, they wave at each formal and dignified salutes, and pass on, each with a wary eye over his shoulder. Such a greeting as this you see between two great spiders on their native heath on the Rio Grande.

CHAPTER III.

Wherever there are crickets the hunting spider and his family never need to go hungry. The film gives you a startling illustration of this fact. But it's no sport for the spider—plain taking advantage of innocent curiosity. The cheerful but curious and unsuspicious cricket seems unable to ever learn his lesson. He can jump out of the reach of any spider, but he doesn't. If he sees a big, fat, furry tarantula sprawling on a rock in the sun his curiosity must be satisfied. He marches up to a hairy paw and proceeds cheerfully to tickle it with his "feelers." The tarantula withdraws his paw pettishly, and seems to say: "Go 'way, you fool cricket. I'm stuffed with your sort already. You make me sick."

The amiable cricket won't take his warning. He proceeds to tickle another furry paw. "Say, chase yourself, stupid!" the tarantula's gestures seem to remark. "Go 'way, or I'll eat you just out of spite."

As the foolishly curious cricket keeps up his investigations, suddenly the spider is sprawling on his back, poking him voraciously into that nightmare maw.

It is a horrible sight—but you wouldn't have missed it for anything. You will have bad dreams for a month, but you've had a fascinating glimpse into a strange world, absolutely unknown to the majority of your fellow beings.

CHAPTER IV.

Tropical, poisonous spiders of this type frequently appear alive and dangerous in Northern seaports. Few of the fruit ships unloading at New York, Philadelphia or Boston fail to bring to light several specimens—usually hidden in large bunches of bananas.

To see one of these creatures thus discovered on the film is suddenly to lose your taste for bananas—at least for a day or two, until you've stopped having those bad dreams.

The Black Widow spider does not appear quite so unfamiliar and horror-inspiring to you, for it is rather common in the eastern part of the United States.

It hides under stones in damp places. If the stone is lifted the spider scurries forth with incredible swiftness. But you gain respect for him as seen very much enlarged on the film. He is not so furry as the tarantula, but moves more swiftly and is equally fierce and savage in his hunting and fighting habits. The Wolf spider kills insects much larger than itself.

The female carries with her her cocoon full of eggs, and when the eggs are hatched for several weeks her back is covered by a swarm of little ones, clinging so tightly to her and to each other that it is nearly impossible to shake them off. In this predicament the female wolf spider spends nearly the whole of her short life.

No "race suicide" here. It is a case of absolute devotion to the future of the race. This is especially true of the "nursery" spider (Dolomedes), whose habitat is the United States. For a month or more the mother clasps the egg cocoon in her mandibles and smallest pair of forelegs and nearly starves for, thus occupied with her precious future brood, she can neither catch food nor consume it.

The nursery spider is filmed in its favorite hunting field—a tiny pad resting on the surface of a pond. It scurries across stretches of open water like lightning, being supported in a most curious way. Under its body, which sinks slightly into the water, the spider buoys itself by means of a film of air. Speed is necessary, for if too long in the water without either support the spider loses its air-film boat and immediately drowns. You behold just such a tragic spectacle as this on the motion picture screen.

The young of the nursery spider are ruthless in their lack of filial affection. At the moment of their hatching the mother spins a nursery web, attaches the cocoon to it, and stands guard with her body shielding the whole affair. She takes no food, and gradually wastes away. When the young spiders voyage away from their cocoon cradle they leave the dead body of the mother in the web which she has spun for their protection.

CHAPTER V.

Most astonishing mechanical genius is manifested by the Mygales, whose habitat is the sterile regions of California. Their familiar name is "trapdoor spiders," for that expression defines their particular mechanical bent.

These spiders live in crevices in rocky hillsides, which they convert into silken-lined tunnels. The opening they close with a neatly-fitting door, semicircular in shape, which is hinged to the wall at its upper edge. The hinges are of silk, and the whole contrivance is so cleverly constructed as to almost defy detection.

To leave his home the spider pokes the trap open with his head and crawls under it. It is impossible for him to leave the door open after him, as the trap immediately falls when his body is free of it. To enter the spider seizes the bottom of the door with its claws and lifts it sufficiently to admit his body. He is more resentful than hospitable, for if you knock on the door while immediately hurls it open and makes such hostile demonstration that you retire precipitately.

Nearly all male spiders of the various hunting species are veritable Beau Brummels when they go acourting. They will perch on a rock in the sun and wash their faces and groom themselves all over for hours. They have ample reason to make themselves as presentable as possible, for the female is the larger and fiercer, and if a suitor is displeasing to her sight she immediately pounces upon and eats him!

Herman Bernstein of New York, secretary of the American Jewish committee, and a recognized authority on the position of the Jews in Russia, in his address before the Harvard Menorah Society, declared that the condition of the 6,000,000 Jews of the Russian Empire is worse today, than before the revolution in 1905.

Debating teams of the Cambridge and Somerville Evening High Schools discussed Government ownership of the telephone system at the Cambridge Latin School Building and at the Somerville High School. One set of Cambridge speakers took the affirmative, winning the decision. Another set of speakers defended the negative and lost.

Pick and Shovel Men Stick to City Jobs

Thirty-eight of the forty-two employes, janitors, life-savers and gymnasium instructors who last week were ordered by Mayor Curley to wield the pick and shovel, or resign, are still at work, razing the hill in Franklin Field. Large quantities of liniment have been applied to lame backs, blistered hands and strained muscles, but the men will not quit.

James D. Edgeworth, foreman in the department, is in charge of the men. He makes a daily report to headquarters. He says the work is progressing and that the men are getting used to it. All but the four men who refused to report the first day are determined to "stick" until summer, when they will again resume their regular department work.

When Those Dependent on You Are Imperiled by Your Dependence on Rubber Alone

You probably believe that nothing has been left undone to shield your family from harm—you take pride in being their protector and they have great confidence in your wisdom and foresight.

Yet perhaps, you may not realize that you are exposing them to injury and possibly death if you or your chauffeur drive during bad road weather without the necessary and only real safeguard against skidding—Weed Chains.

If you have not appreciated this great danger, then do so now. For safety's sake—for you own peace of mind, fully equip your car today with

Weed Anti-Skid Chains

"The Device that Makes Motoring Safe"

Safety demands that all tires be equipped with Weed Chains. It doesn't require the gift of second sight to see why this is true. Rubber slips—never grips. It slides on wet pavements and roads like a cake of soap on the moistened hands. It lacks the bite-and-hang-on ability to prevent skidding.

Weed Chains are diamond hard—many times harder than their opposing element, the pavement or road. They strike the ground squarely—hold and release instantly No matter how muddy or icy the road, they hold on like a bull dog, prevent side-skid and drive-slip.

Weed Chains are attached without any jacks. You lay the chain over the wheel, with the hooks at the rear. Tuck the slack end under the front of the wheel. Run the car forward until the wheel clears the end on the ground. Draw the chains together, hook the hooks in the end links and the thing is done.

NOTES AND GOSSIP OF THE WORLD'S GREAT AUTOMOBILE SHOW AT MECHANICS BUILDING

By J. C. KERRISON.

The motor show in Mechanics Building is the greatest industrial exposition ever held in this or any other country. It has brought together the finished product of the motor industry, men skilled in mechanics who by years of experience have been able to bring the motor industry to its present condition, which is as perfect as human ingenuity can accomplish.

The last few years have seen no radical changes in motor car construction. Changes have been made in matters of detail alone, with possibly the exception of the sleeve valve and rotary motors, which are proving to be successful developments in motor car construction and are attracting much of attention at the big exhibition.

The question is often asked "What is the best car?" There is no best car. The best car for one man may be the poorest car for another. A man who wants a racer has no use for a limousine as a general thing, and the man who wants a roadster does not want a touring car or a limousine.

All cars are good and the builders have made more than one car. The preponderance of cars exhibited are of the highest class, irrespective of the selling price. A man is today getting more for his money in an automobile than ever before.

To thoroughly inspect the motor show requires more than one visit. The great floor is overcrowded with motor cars of all descriptions. The basement contains a quota not only of motor cars but of the latest product of the motor industry—the cycle car. The balconies likewise contain their quota of cycle and motor cars and last but not least, a veritable wealth of accessories.

* * *

The interest of the leading automobile engineers at the show seems to centre on the Weidely motor, exhibited at the Premier booth. These experts are frank to confess that Weidely has made a big advance in automobile engine construction. The point that particularly impresses them is that the Weidely motor in principle is exactly the same as the ordinary type of automobile engine.

* * *

"We are greatly handicapped in our exhibit," said General-Manager Albion L. Dunforth, of the Cadillac, "by lack of space, which makes it impossible to show a full line of cars. Our 1914 line consists of seven distinct types, all on one chassis, however. The limited space allows us to show only five. The cut-open chassis, the demonstration of the improved electric cranking device and the two-speed rear axle attract such crowds that many are unable to get close enough to see."

* * *

Salesmanager Frank Willis of the Lozier Motor Company has taken off his coat to assist Wentworth and Woodick, the local distributors, in distributing the Lozier allotment. At this booth are shown two of the finest finished chassis in the entire display.

* * *

The Briscoe car, which created such a sensation at the New York and Chicago shows, is attracting no end of attention at the display of the Charles Motor Company. This car is a five-passenger light touring car, commodious, and weighing only 3,700 pounds, possessing refinement and smart style.

* * *

H. Ross Maddocks, general distributor of the Twombly cyclecar, stated that on Saturday night he had sold outright at retail twenty-five of the Twombly cyclecars. This he considers a record for the opening night of any show.

* * *

M. F. Chase, of the Stutz Motor Car Company, is meeting with considerable success in the distribution of the Motz cyclecar, having signed a contract for the distribution of this car in Greater Boston.

* * *

Many of the visitors to the automobile show are taking a great deal of interest in the new plant of the Ford Motor Company in Cambridge. Charles E. Fay, local manager of the Ford Company, finds but little time this week to give to the new building, as the sale of cars at the showroom keeps him constantly approving orders.

* * *

J. N. Clark, sales manager of the National Motor Car Company of Indianapolis, is here for the show and is being entertained by W. H. Stevens, the local distributor of the National and president of the Bay State Automobile Club.

* * *

Charles A. Duryea, who built one of the first gasoline automobiles in 1892, is exhibiting the Duryea Cyclecar at the show. He is associated with Henry Crowthers, who was editor of the Bicycle World in Boston eighteen years ago.

* * *

Albert Champion, famous in the days of bicycle racing as a builder of motor pace, now manufacturer of spark plugs, has been attending the show. He is not an exhibitor this year, but after looking over the show he decided somebody gave him a wrong steer.

* * *

J. A. Manning, in charge of the Springfield branch of the Knox Company has arrived at the show and will stay the remainder of the week.

* * *

Walter White of the White Company, will arrive today and will remain at the show the rest of the week. Arthur Schaife was on hand today and will continue while the show lasts.

* * *

Dan Harvey, the local representative of the Truffault-Hartford Suspension Company, announced today at the show that General Manager Al Reeves has resigned and will become the general manager of the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

* * *

Walter Weidely, son of George A. Weidely of the Premier Company, chief engineer of the Premier factory and designer of the Weidely motor, will be in attendance throughout the week explaining the motor and delivering talks afternoon and evening.

* * *

F. S. Miller, from the Maxwell Company factory at Detroit, is delivering talks daily on the "25" chassis. W. D. Paine of the same company, who was in charge of the Philadelphia branch, has been appointed Eastern supervisor from Virginia to Maine.

* * *

Tomorrow the Maxwell exhibit will be rearranged, the "35" touring car being taken out to make space for a 6-36 seven passenger.

* * *

Jake Newmark, advertising manager for the Oakland Motor Car Company, says that the Boston show is the best that has ever been held. He thinks that the decorations are wonderful and the display of cars is the greatest he ever saw.

* * *

One of the new devices that is attracting a great deal of attention is the new Gray & Davis headlight, made in the big plant of this company across the Charles River in Cambridge. This headlight is designed to eliminate dazzle and yet illuminate not only the road ahead, but directly in front of the car and the front of the car itself.

* * *

The Oakland Motor Car Company has entered the light six field with a car which embodies all of the latest accepted practices. The car is said to be the largest car built that comes in the light six classification. The body is of the streed line type with tapered sloping hood and rounded German silver "V"-shaped radiator.

* * *

The White display, both in the Grand Hall at the Auto Show and in the basement, is coming in for a great deal of attention. This company has always maintained a high standard in automobile construction and design, and the models on exhibition, except for a few minor improvements, remain practically unchanged. One of the improvements which applies to all White cars is the use of a single-plate clutch, running in oil. Instead of the leather-faced cone clutch used heretofore. This change was due to the superiority of a new plate clutch of special White design, which operates with remarkable smoothness and is extremely accessible.

* * *

The Boston Buick Company has made a sale of three Buick Model No. 24 cars to the S. S. Pierce Company, to be used by its wholesale salesmen.

* * *

One of the attractions at the show is the revolving platform in the Buick exhibit, on which is mounted a cream-colored Buick roadster. This exhibit is one of the neatest in the entire show.

* * *

C. P. Henderson, general manager of the Regal Motor Car Company, is in constant attendance at the booth of the W. L. Russell Company, where the Regal cars are displayed.

* * *

J. P. Gage, representing the American Cyclecar Company of Bridgeport, has contracted with the Joseph E. Green Company of No. 330 Purchase street for the sale of half a million Trumbull cyclecars. This company is taking the entire agency for the Trumbull in New England exclusive of Connecticut.

* * *

F. R. Bumpf, sales manager of the Marion Motor Car Company, is at the show, renewing old acquaintances and making plans for the future distribution of the Marion output in this section.

JEFFERY CARS SHOW REDUCTION IN WEIGHT WITH HIGHER POWER

The automobile show points very plainly a tendency of motor car manufacturers today to forsake the big, bulky cars of former years and to strive for economy, not alone in the first cost, but in upkeep.

This is strikingly true of the Jeffery line, the leader in which is the "four," weighing only slightly over 2,900 pounds and driven by a motor which turns up normally at about 2,200 revolutions per minute and develops forty horse-power, although its cylinder dimensions are only 3 3/4x5 1/4.

A year or two ago had any manufacturer exhibited as a powerful car an automobile driven by a power plant of these dimensions he would have been laughed at, not only by the public, but by his fellow manufacturers. Today the fallacy that engine bulk means horse-power has been exploded and the good designer is expending upon motor speed to develop horse-power to drive a car which acquires its strength not from bulk, but from the use of the highest grade of materials.

CHALMERS COMPANY DINES FACTORY MEN AND SELLING FORCE

The annual dinner of the Chalmers Motor Company called out nearly one hundred members of the New England selling organization and the Chalmers factory force. Hugh Chalmers, president of the company, was toastmaster. The speakers were E. A. Gilmore of the Whitten-Gilmore Company, Chalmers dealers in Boston; Ernest Sweet of Providence, O. L. Blake of Keene, G. A. Wagg of Portland, A. A. Mills of Pittsfield and A. C. Pollard of Nashua.

Mr. Chalmers told the New England dealers that the 1914 season is, thus far, the biggest year in the history of the company; that the Chalmers factory built and sold nearly twice as many cars in December, January and February as were built in the same months of any previous season, and that the order for the Spring delivery are more than 40 per cent. ahead of any earlier year.

In addition to the speakers, the guests of the Chalmers factory organization were C. S. Lord, E. E. Brewer and D. Plummer of Portland, F. S. Eddy, J. L. Welch, E. H. Shaw and H. S. Chase of Nashua, Don McVichie of Ludington, Mich.; F. L. Caulkins, Middletown; G. A. Pulsifer, Scharton, Mass.; C. A. Blake, Keene; D. F. Morris, Providence; J. W. Norcross and K. M. Hitchcock, Springfield; F. H. Kenney and M. H. Whittle, Worcester; W. S. Stenhofer, Newport; L. P. Comiskey, Dover; C. S. Hodnett, Sanford, Me.; J. J. Hogan, Lowell; Joseph Robertson, J. A. Keefe and W. J. Smith, Lawrence; Horace Booth, Pittsfield; J. J. Parker, J. J. Fitzsimmons and J. F. Parker, Gardner; H. C. Barr, St. John, N. B.; L. J. Cass, Athol.

Walter Brady Wants to Make Affidavit

"Does anybody in here know where I can find a notary public. I want to make an affidavit," said a tall, sandy-haired fellow who walked into the press representative's room at the Auto Show. "I want to make affidavit that this is the best show I have ever attended."

He was Walter Brady, the official dispenser of fun for the Studebaker Company. Thursday afternoon the salesmen of the Studebaker Company will be banqueted at a Back Bay hotel, and Mr. Brady, no doubt, will make one of the speeches that have made him famous.

E. R. Benson, vice-president of the Studebaker Company, will arrive at the show today, as will J. H. Buck of the Studebaker factory.

New Firestone Auto on Display

Anyone who has felt that the automobile industry has settled down to a point where extreme novelties and unusual novelties are no longer seen, need only look at the attractive car just completed in the local Firestone Service Station, No. 656 Beacon street, to be convinced of the contrary.

Manager T. J. Glenn said his mechanics have felt that they were in a position from their daily contact with many different makes of cars, to observe the best points of each model and incorporate the leading features into a composite model car. Now he has the proof.

The Weidely Motor

The Talk of the Town

Ten Years' Advance Over Standard Practice Without Disturbing a Single Proved Poppet-Valve Principle

The Weidely Motor in the Premier Six

Here is a SIX-cylinder motor with valves in the head, and with the camshaft placed directly over the valves.

It eliminates the rocker-arms, push-rods and rollers that add weight and friction to other valve-in-the-head motors.

This means increased efficiency because it utilizes the power from gasoline that other motors waste. It means more miles from a gallon of gasoline in a SIX than other FOUR-cylinder motors of equal size will make.

Have you seen this smooth motor with greater power and speed than other six-cylinder motors of larger size?

A Wonderful Engine

The few moving parts of this motor are enclosed. And the entire valve mechanism is lubricated. That further reduces friction, and effects permanent quiet.

Thus you have in this motor unusual advantages without change in the standard proven poppet-valve motor principles.

PREMIER

This is "the coming motor" that has already "arrived." Go see it on exhibit.

Efficiency—Smart Style

The Premier is the only car in America with the Weidely Motor. And the Premier Six is as handsome as any car, domestic or foreign. You can prove this to your own satisfaction. Come see it.

The Premier is one car in the show which will make worth while your visit.

KEEP YOUR CAR

Keep Your Car!

The White Company's Solution of the Annual Trading Problem

Too many cars sold today are built to be traded; to last but one or two years; of ordinary materials; of extreme design; and, therefore, quickly useless and out of style. The second-hand market is flooded with such cars, and their value is next to nothing.

There Are Practically No White Cars on the Second-Hand Market

The real merit of any make of car is best shown by its absence from the second-hand market.

Look through the classified lists of any newspaper. Note the scarcity of Whites in the column after column of cars advertised for sale. Think what this means.

The chassis of White Cars are built in the same factory, by the same men, of the same identical materials as White Trucks.

And the most essential points of motor truck superiority—the features which have given White the supremacy among all motor trucks, both in quantity and value of production—are durability and continued economy of operation.

The bodies of White Cars are proper in outline, dignified and conservative, and because never extreme, are always in style.

White bodies are built, like White chassis, to last for years, and are not designed to make the owner feel obliged, for mere appearance sake, to purchase a new car every year.

Extreme styles in motor cars are due more to the desire on the part of the manufacturer to force an immediate market rather than to sell cars which will give definite satisfaction for years to come.

So thoroughly does the public believe in the superior wearing qualities and continued economy of operation of White Cars, that every White Dealer has a waiting list for used White Cars which he cannot supply.

The White Company, as far as White Cars are concerned, has no second-hand problem.

And because the demand for used White Cars so far exceeds the supply, White Owners are continually importuned to trade their cars for other makes, because dealers know that used Whites can be sold immediately for the highest cash price.

But White Owners rarely trade. They know that their old Whites are better today, more economical to operate, and will be worth more next year and in years to come than the new cars offered in exchange.

Buy your car from a manufacturer who builds for keeps—not for trades.

The Woman Thou Gavest Me

HALL CAINE'S GREATEST STORY

THE NARRATIVE OF MARY O'NEILL

FOURTH PART
I FALL IN LOVE

Copyright, 1912, by Hearst's Magazine. Copyright, 1913, by Doubleday, Page & Co. Copyright, Great Britain. Copyright, 1913, by J. B. Lippincott Company.

How we laughed! He laughed because I laughed, and I laughed because he was laughing. I had some delicious moments of femininity, too (such as no woman can resist), until it struck me suddenly that in all this make-believe we were making love to each other again. That frightened me for a time, but I told myself that everything was safe as long as we could carry on the game.

It was not easy to do so, though, for some of the laughter had tears behind it, and some of the merriment had an unexpected sting, because things had a meaning for us now which they never had before, and we were compelled to realize what life had done for us.

Thus I found my throat throbbing when I recalled the loss of our boat, leaving us alone together on that cruel rock with the rising tide threatening to submerge us, and I nearly choked when I repeated my last despairing cry: "I'm not a slugger! . . . and you'll have to save me up . . . and leave me here, and save yourself."

It was like walking over a solfatara with the thin hot earth ready to break in under our feet.

To escape from it I sat down at the piano and began to sing. I dared not sing the music I loved best—the solemn music of the convent—so I sang some of the nonsense songs I had heard in the streets. At one moment I twisted round on the piano stool and said:

"I'll bet you anything"—(I always caught Martin's tone in Martin's company), "you can't remember the song I sang sitting in the boat with William Rufus on my lap."

"I'll bet you anything I can," said Martin.

"Oh, no, you can't," I said.

"Have it as you like, hoch, but sing it for all," said Martin, and then I sang—

"Oh, Sally's the girl for me,
Our Sally's the girl for me,
I'll marry the girl that I love best,
When I come back from sea."

But that arrow of memory had been sharpened on Time's grindstone, and it seemed to pierce through us, so Martin proposed that we should try the rollicking chorus which the excursionists had sung on the pleasure steamer the night before.

He did not know a note of music and he had no more voice than a corn-cake, but crushing up on to the music-stool by my side, he banged away with his left hand while I played with my right, and we sang together in a wild delightful discord—

"Ramsey town, Ramsey town,
Smiling by the sea,
Here's a health to my true love,
Wheresoe'er she be."

We laughed again when that was over, but I knew I could not keep it up much longer, and every now and then I forgot that I was in my boudoir and seemed to see that lonesome plateau, twelve thousand feet above the icy barrier that guards the Pole, and Martin toiling through blizzards over rolling waves of snow.

"LIKE BREAKING ICE."

Towards midnight we went out on to the balcony to look at the lightning for the last time. The thunder was shaking the cliffs and rolling along them like cannon-balls, and Martin said:

"It sounds like the breaking of the ice, down there."

When we returned to the room he told me he would have to be off early in the morning, before I was out of bed, having something to do in Blackwater, where "the boys were getting up a spree of some sort."

In this way he rattled on for some minutes, obviously talking himself down and trying to prevent me from thinking. But the grim moment came at last, and it was like the empty gap of time when you are waiting for the whirring of the clock that is to tell the end of the old year and the beginning of the new.

My cuckoo clock struck twelve. Martin looked at me. I looked at him. Our eyes fell. He took my hand. It was cold and moist. His own was hot and trembling.

"So this is . . . the end," he said.

"Yes . . . the end." I answered.

"Well, we've had a jolly evening to finish up with, anyway," he said. "I shall always remember it."

I tried to say he would soon have other evenings to think about that would make him forget this one.

"Never in this world!" he answered.

I tried to wish him good luck, and great success, and a happy return to fame and fortune.

He looked at me with his great liquid eyes and said:

"Ah, well, that's all as one now."

I tried to tell him it would always be a joy to me to remember that he and I had been such great, great friends.

He looked at me again, and answered:

"That's all as one also."

I reproached myself for the pain I was causing him, and to keep myself in countenance I began to talk of the beauty and nobility of renunciation—each sacrificing for the other's sake all sinful thoughts and desires."

"Yes, I'm doing what you wish," he said. "I can't deny you anything."

That cut me deep, so I went on to say that if I had acted otherwise I should always have had behind me the memory of the vows I had broken, the sacrament I had violated, and the faith I had abandoned.

"All the same we might have been very happy," he said, and then my throat became so thick that I could not say any more.

After a few moments he said:

"It breaks my heart to leave you. But I suppose I must, though I don't know what is going to happen."

"All that is in God's hands," I said.

"Yes," said Martin, "it's up to Him now."

MADE HEART ACHE

It made my heart ache to look at his desolate face, so, struggling hard with my voice, I tried to tell him he must not despair.

"You are so young," I said. "Surely the future holds much happiness for you."

And then, though I knew that the bare idea of another woman taking the love I was turning away would have made the world a blank for me, I actually said something about the purest joys of love falling to his lot some day.

"No, by the Lord God," said Martin. "There'll be no other woman for me. If I'm not to have you I'll wear the willow for you the same as if you were dead."

There was a certain pain in that, but there was a thrill of secret joy in it too.

He was still holding my hand. We held each other's hands a long time. In spite of my affected resignation I could not let his hand go. I felt as if I were a drowning woman and his hand were my only safety. Nevertheless I said:

"We must say good-night and good-bye now."

"And if it is for ever?"

"Don't say that."

"But if it is?"

"Well, then . . . for ever."

"At least give me something to take away with me," he said.

"Better not," I answered, but even as I spoke I dropped the handkerchief which I had been holding in my other hand and he picked it up.

I knew that my tears, though I was trying to keep them back, were trickling down my cheeks. I saw that his face was all broken up as it had been the night before.

There was a moment of silence in which I was conscious of nothing but the fierce beating of my pulses, and then he raised my hand to his lips, dropped it gently and walked over to the door.

HUNGERED FOR LOVE.

But after he had opened it he turned and looked at me. I looked at him, longing, craving, hungering for his love as for a flame at which my heart could warm itself.

Then came a blinding moment. It seemed as if in an instant he lost all control of himself, and his love came rushing upon him like a mighty surging river.

Flinging the door back he returned to me with long strides, and snatching me up in his great arms, he lifted me off my feet, clasped me tightly to him, kissed me passionately on the mouth and cried in a quivering, husky voice:

"You are my wife. I am your real husband. I am not leaving you because you are married to this brute, but for the sake of your soul. We love each other. We shall continue to love each other. No matter where you are, or what they do with you, you are mine and always will be."

My blood was boiling. The world was reeling round me. There was a buzzing in my brain. All my spiritual impulses had gone. I was a woman, he is a man, and it was the same to me as if the primordial man had taken possession of me by sheer force. Yet I was not afraid of that. I rejoiced in it. I wanted to give myself up to it.

But the next moment Martin had dropped me, and fled from the room, clashing the door behind him.

I felt as if a part of myself had been torn from my breast and had gone out with him.

The room seemed to become dark.

GIRL TELLS HOW TO WHIP HOLDUP MAN

BROCKTON, March 10.—Miss Minnie Goldstein in court today told how she trounced the would-be holdup man who snatched her pocketbook last night, and the man in question, Charles A. Peterson, quivered in the dock, his head bandaged—heaving a sigh of relief when the judge held him in $500 for the Grand Jury.

Afterwards, Miss Goldstein—who is a young woman of twenty-one, stocky and substantial—gave her advice to other girls attacked as she was. In court, called as a witness, she said:

"This man snatched my pocketbook. I turned on him and caught him by the neck and squeezed till he gave it back. Then I took a good hold of his collar and started to take him to the police station."

The judge asked: "His head is bandaged—did you hit him?"

"Oh, yes," she confessed. "I slapped him a little."

Then Peterson was held for the Grand Jury, and outside Miss Goldstein said:

"It's foolishness for a girl to be afraid of men and squeal and shriek. Most men aren't any stronger than strong girls. Girls ought to exercise and keep husky and wiry. A girl has more nerve than a man, and will fight after a man would quit. That gives her an advantage.

"If a man speaks to you, or snatches your pocketbook, or attacks you in any way, don't scream, or run, or even shriek away from him. Get hold of his neck."

B. A. A. SEVEN CALLS OFF HOCKEY SERIES WITH PILGRIM TEAM FOR CITY HOCKEY TITLE

B.A.A. SEVEN CALLS PILGRIMS CONTESTS OFF

The hockey series between the Boston Athletic Association seven and the Pilgrim A. A. has been declared off by the B. A. A.

The trouble arose Saturday evening when the B. A. A. was scheduled to play the Montreal A. A. A. Captain "Trat" Hicks of the Unicorn seven selected Earnest Dooty to officiate with a Montreal man, selected by the visitors.

After one period had been played, Coach Ralph Winsor of the B. A. A. attempted to make a shift in the officials, but the Montreal men would not agree to such a course, and Coach Winsor would not allow his team to continue play.

In order to cover themselves, the management of the Arena had the Pilgrim A. A. play the Montreal team, and Coach Winsor now claims that the Arena failed to back him up when they put on the Pilgrim A. A.

The B. A. A. is under contract with the Boston Arena to play not more than two games a week with teams picked by the Arena, and a sum of money was to be turned over to the B. A. A. at the end of the season for this.

The money has not been forwarded to the B. A. A. as yet, and under the present conditions it is not likely that the Arena management will pay the sum.

BRIEF SPORTS OF ALL SORTS
By RILEY

WE have another packet of letters from aroused Britishers who are eager to prove that crowds of 100,000 or more are not uncommon at sporting events on the other side. The strength of conviction of the writers is astonishing, considering that not more than 50,000 persons ever saw an American sporting event, to the best of our knowledge, and Americans are conceded to be the greatest spenders on earth

FOR instance, J. E. Smith of Springfield writes the following, which he says is compiled from official records:

Boxing attendance for a football match in all Europe—Chicago—International between Scotland and England, March 12, 1912. There were 127,307 spectators present. The previous record, at the same ground, was 121,452 on the same date.

The English Final Cup between Aston Villa and Sunderland, April 19, 1913, drew 120,028 paid admissions.

League game records are: Chelsea and Tottenham Hotspur, March 29, 1913, 77,000; Chelsea and Manchester United, March 29, 1907, 76,000; Chelsea and Sunderland, March 30, 1907, 75,000; Newcastle and Sunderland, at Sunderland, March 29, 1909, 68,000; Aston Villa and Sunderland, at Aston, April 19, 1913, 60,000.

Midweek games include: Bradford City and Newcastle, at Old Trafford, Manchester, playing English Cup Final, drew, March 31, 1911, 69,000; same ground, March 31, 1910, 66,000; Barnsley and Newcastle United, Cup-tie Final, February, April 19, 1910, 69,585.

Record "gates" at an English cup tie, apart from the final or semi-final, are: Manchester United and Blackburn Rovers, at Old Trafford, Manchester, March 9, 1912, 70,504; Aston Villa and Burnley, March 5, 1910, 62,418; Chelsea and Middlesbrough, March 11, 1911, 59,617 (gates were rushed after being taped and counted); Manchester United and Aston Villa, Old Trafford, February 6, 1911, 60,101.

CLARENCE PARKER of Lynn has enclosed a leaf from the Racing and Football Outlook Annual, repeating some of the above figures. Mr. Parker says:

"Say, for instance, I go to a football game. I think you will find that they are practically speaking, all seated. Now, if you pay a visit to a football game in the British Isles, and that refers to the case except for a small number in the grandstand, and it only consists a bit of common sense to see that a ground will accommodate a great many more persons standing than seated.

"But here is another side of the story which comes from Michael E. Snyder:

"I read the attendance controversy between James Connolly and the English sportsmen in your column and after getting a letter from a friend in London who has spent considerable time in England, I decided to write them and try to get a book together that would give some reliable data on the matter. I wrote a number of the correspondents and received a very courteous reply from Ingoldsby Legh, saying that he was in America, but nothing of the sports writers who were in the habit of writing annually. A copy does give you to the gate in England.

ONE thing is certain. If 100,000 see any of these games in England or Scotland, they can't get close enough to obtain a peep of what is going on. At last Fall's Yale-Harvard football game, which was played before about 40,000 persons, the writer sat in the press stand which is at the top of the Stadium, and one of the farthest points removed from the scene, particularly when the teams were in play at the farther end of the field. He had to use his field glass to make out individual players. The Yale bowl, now in process of construction, will seat 75,000, according to estimates. It will be the largest amphitheatre on this continent. Spectators who sit in the rear of the bowl, back of one of the goal posts, cannot make out individual players at the other end of the playing field without the aid of field glasses.

AND another thing is certain. If the Yale and Harvard authorities could devise a playing field that would accommodate 100,000 spectators we sincerely believe every seat would be taken at the price now charged to undergraduates, $2, or at least at $1, per head, for the annual Yale-Harvard game. Judging from the crowds turned away from all world's series baseball encounters, reasonable gate charges would attract similar crowds if there were room for them.

ON the matter of crowds, however, we must remind writers and readers that big figures are easily spouted, but difficult to materialize. There are comparatively few cities in the world that contain more than 100,000 inhabitants. A surging throng of 50,000 looks to the man who first sees such a gathering like a million. We remember when we first "covered" a fire for a newspaper, twenty years ago. The flames looked big enough to consume Hades. We straightaway estimated the damage at about a million dollars; the insurance adjusters settled for $18,500. And the first time we reported a big crowd we estimated it at 50,000, but only 15,452 paid their way in and the management was very suspicious that they jailed the kids who tried to peek through the knot holes. So the 15,452 was not far from accurate.

YES, a hundred thousand are a devilvuish of people. And the fact that a quarter of that number are interested in any sporting event will convince you of the importance of sports in the news of the world.

Boxing Chatter

Willie Moore, brother of the once illustrious Pal, is due to mix with Tommy Langdon, who has been coming back strong in the lightweight division, in Philadelphia tonight. Willie has the cleverness of his brother and is, as well, more of a mixer and willing to take a blow to land one.

Tom McCarey is lining up a swell bunch of shows for his Vernon, Cal., club, and already has Freddy Welsh, Joes Rivers, Jack Britton and Leach Cross under contract to take part in bouts between now and Labor Day. Jimmy Coulon and Jimmy Clabby are on his list, also, provided he can find suitable opponents.

Jack Dillon, who has been posing as a welterweight for a considerable while, has at length decided to admit that he is getting husky and is now a candidate for the honors in the light heavyweight class. At that he should be able to make them all carry a bit to beat him.

Eddie McGoorty makes his final appearance in Australia, Saturday night, when he bumps up against Jeff Smith of Bayonne, N. J., who is also one of the American "stars" in the Antipodes. Jeff should be mighty soft picking for Eddie, who will leave for England the day after the fight.

The regular Manchester show this evening has Terry Martin and Dave Kurtz billed for the main attraction. Both are mixers and the affair should furnish a lot of excitement, if not any too much science.

In the semi-finals Joe Budreau of Medford and Jack Buntice have it out and this should be another mill worth watching as both boys are hitters and have visions of climbing up in their divisions.

Jack Britton, who has just turned down a $3,000 offer from "Snowy" Baker to box in Australia, also has a match tonight, boxing Joe Graves of Brooklyn. The affair should not prove much more than a practice bout for Jack.

Out on the coast, Grover Hayes comes to fight again, swapping wallops with Joe Azevedo in Oakland. Grover has found the picking rather good in the Golden Gate territory and has added quite a few pennies to that well-known bankroll.

The retirement of Jimmy Walsh, probably the best little scrapper ever hailing from the Hub, will cause a lot of regret among the real boxing fans. Jimmy has always been a clean fighter and one worth going miles to watch.

Gilbert Gallant of Chelsea who mests Danny O'Brien at Salt Lake City, Wednesday, writes that he is in fine fettle and expects to have little trouble cleaning up the western scrapper.

At North Abington, Thursday, Heywood Briggs and Battling Sylvia are carded as the piece de resistance.

WALTER CAMP'S COLUMN

Comment by the Famous Expert on the Athletic News of the Day.

Written Expressly for the Boston American.
By WALTER CAMP.

Dr. Ehler, chairman of the committee on football fatalities of the Collegiate Association, has reported that there had been only four deaths through the year attributed to football, which, on investigation, brought forth the fact that in only one case was football more than a contributing cause of death. He said:

"This game in particular, and intercollegiate sports in general, cannot stand of fall because of the number of knees sprained, or the number of hearts dilated, or even the number of lives lost, because lives are lost in a far larger way and with far more direful results through social and moral demoralization (to which these games are direct antidotes) than through the physical injury of a comparatively few persons. The question must turn upon the effects of the playing upon the moral character of the general student body."

THINGS GOING WRONG IN BRITAIN.

Besides the contention over the Olympic fund there are still other indications that things are not going right in British athletics.

The governors of Eton, the great English school, found by an examination last term a most extraordinary condition of affairs, and one which they regard very seriously. Upon physical examination not more than 20 per cent. of the junior boys were found fit to take part in the school sports.

This decline in the physical standing of the boys has been marked during the past few years, and the rule which formerly prevailed making football, cricket and rowing compulsory among the boys in the lower school, has been abolished.

WHY KOLEHMAINEN WAS UNFIT.

A few weeks ago the column called attention to the severe strain placed upon that remarkable runner, Hannes Kolehmainen. Certain revelations which came out in the investigation regarding the suspension of Kivlat and Kolehmainen for a race which resulted in a tie, confirmed these statements.

It seems that his trainer reported to the investigating committee that on the day before his important two-mile race in which he was to come against Kivlat, on of the best of our distance runners, Kolehmainen ran seven miles in the morning and four in the afternoon, while still in a partial state of recovery from a bad leg which had prevented his competing for nearly a month.

Now the most remarkable physique in the world will not stand that sort of thing for more than a year or two, and it does seem as if friends of the Finnish runner would do well to caution him that if his future career is to be what it should, like that for instance, of the great runner, W. Y. George, his work ought to be patterned upon greater moderation.

RITCHIE IS IN FINE SHAPE FOR WOLGAST BOUT

By SOL PLEX.

CHICAGO, March 10.—Willie Ritchie has been among us just a little more than a week preparing himself to defend his honors against Ad Wolgast in a ten-round, no-decision contest at Milwaukee Thursday night.

The first lightweight champion that California, America's home of the gloveman, ever produced, has worked diligently and has impressed all who have studied him with his all-around class as a ringman.

Willie, well known around here three years ago when working out of the Packey McFarland stable under Emil Tiffey, came back to this neck of the woods a rather discredited champion.

RITCHIE CHANGES OPINIONS.

But Ritchie has dispelled much of this feeling by his championship ways both in and out of the ring.

Win or lose, Ritchie will win the admiration of the crowd that goes him perform in the beer town ring.

Ritchie has become unpopular in a measure through happenings mainly not his own fault. When he won the title he was under the management of the astute but dictatorial Billy Nolan, a good manager, but maker of enemies.

Nolan refused to permit Ritchie to fight for six months after he grabbed the title from Wolgast.

After breaking with Nolan, Ritchie went in and whaled Joe Rivers in convincing fashion. Rivers then was his most serious challenger.

HARD LUCK CHAMPION.

Willie waited a time, then hopped a train across the continent and punched a few holes in Leach Cross in a New York ring. Back to the west coast he went, and then trouble started again. He called off one match with Harlem Tommy Murphy because of an abscess in his nose; he cancled another with the same party because of an accident to his Achilles tendon.

Then started the rumor that he was a champion-afraid-to-fight. Then he sidetracked Murphy and closed with Wolgast for Milwaukee.

Now he has rounded to all right and aims to demonstrate that he, like Wolgast when champion, can fight them all and whale them all.

New Boxing Club for Cambridge Fans

Boxing fans will probably have their wishes gratified when the New University A. C. of Cambridge throws open its doors March 17. The matchmaker is slickering with several first-class New England boxers for the opening attraction. George Alger and Matty Baldwin, two boys later with Steve Kennedy, are mentioned.

PRESIDENT LANNIN OF THE RED SOX AT HOT SPRINGS TODAY TO SIGN UP PITCHER COLLINS

BRAVES HAVE FIRST REAL GAME OF THE SEASON AT MACON TRAINING GROUNDS

SOX HEAD WILL TRY TO SIGN UP COLLINS TODAY

By JACK CONWAY.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 10.—President Joseph J. Lannin of the Red Sox will arrive here today if the railroad companies do their part. The big chief of the Fenway Park team is coming here to have a heart-to-heart talk with Jack Barry regarding the plans of the club and in particular to try to sign up Eddy Collins.

Collins has been visited here by Federal League scouts who have tried to induce him to join the outlaws. It is said that the Federals are willing to give Collins a three year contract, calling for $5,000 a year. The big southpaw practically agreed to the terms made by the Red Sox management several months ago, but that was before he was approached by the outlaws.

President Lannin, however, declares that the Federals are the ones who will have to come over the back road, and as he is worth close to $2,000,000, it seems almost a certainty that Collins will sign a Red Sox contract for 1914. With Joe Wood out of the game until June, the Red Sox cannot afford to lose Collins' services.

HOOPER DUE TODAY.

Harry Hooper, another extraordinary, did also leave the Red Sox training camp the "once over" today unless he is delayed coming here. Harry spent the Winter at Capitola, California, and would have arrived in this fair town yesterday if he had not missed railroad connections at Los Angeles.

Hooper usually reports for Spring practice in excellent condition and is not obliged to do a great deal of strenuous training. There are better all-around ball players in the big leagues than the coast boy, but he is quiet and unassuming and avoids the limelight, with the result that the majority of "fans" do not realize his real worth to the club.

Carrigan will give the rookie hand, which will include twenty-eight men when Hooper reaches town, another strenuous workout today. The players will be put through hard batting and fielding practice in the morning, after which they will take the famous mineral baths.

The players who arrived here Sunday got their first workout yesterday and are limping around the hotel lobby today. Most of them did no training during the Winter months and are feeling the effects of their workouts.

JANVRIN IN FINE SHAPE.

Harold Janvrin has a little something on the other players as he is in excellent condition for so early in the season. The Roxbury boy is a slashing good hockey player and spent a great deal of his time last Winter practicing with the Eighth and Irish-American sevens at the Arena.

Heinie Wagner will not do any more work on the ball field for at least two weeks. The veteran shortstop has been taking long hikes over the mountains and the baths, but advises the information that he will be able to hold his own with the best of them when the season gets under way.

Carrigan was sole to hold his first regular infield practice yesterday. The line-up was: Engle, 1b; Yerkes, 2b; Janvrin, ss; and Gardner, 3b. The men displayed plenty of pepper and fielded grounders and tossed the ball around in snappy style.

The entire squad will be given a long batting drill again today. The young pitchers are in fairly good condition and will make things interesting for the fence busters on the squad.

It has been impossible to get much of a line on the recruits with the team so early, but really done very light work.

A Girl's Ideal Man Is Made Over as Often Before She Marries as Her Dresses Are Afterward

THE AMERICAN'S MAGAZINE PAGE

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"WILFRED has given up writing for the magazines," said the Manicure Lady. "At least, that is what he says he has sworn off on, and I guess he means it this time. It seems that he made fifteen dollars last week writing some ads for a new kind of soup that comes in cans, and they told him that they would give him more money than that if he could turn out a certain number of verses every week. He always starts in counting his money before he has it in his mitt, and the old man is always telling him not to do that, but this time I think he is a little nearer to plain loony than he has ever been over any one thing, which is saying a whole lot. He says that if he can get a few more concerns like this soup house on his stuff he will be getting the dough so fast he can't spend it."

"I shouldn't think that a poet like your brother would want to do anything so common as to write soup ads," said the Head Barber.

"I guess it did gall him a little until he got that fifteen dollars," said the Manicure Lady. "He used to think that he would be satisfied just to write poems for the people that come after him to appreciate, but the old gent told him there wasn't a chance for any of the stuff he wrote to live longer than a house fly, so when he got the fifteen bucks I suppose he figured that fifteen is fifteen, and now he is going to the soup poems ten hours a day. I think some of them is kind of cute, too. How would you like this one, George, if you had a soup you wanted to advertise:

"Soup is very nourishing;
It keeps the body flourishing.
The soup which most does take my fancy
Is canned and sold by P. T. Clancy."

"I think that sounds a lot better than some of the high-toned poems that he used to try to write," said the Head Barber. "There is some sense to the one you just read."

"I thought it pretty good myself," said the Manicure Lady, "and Wilfred figures that it ought to sell quite a lot of soup. Here is another he wrote for the Clancy people:

"The gods that on Olympus dwelt
Put lots of nectar under their belt.
They drank this nectar morn and noon
And night,
Which kept them beautifully tight.
To drinking nectar I would not stoop,
But I am fond of Clancy's Soup."

"That ain't a bad one, either," said the Head Barber. "I wouldn't be surprised if this would be a gold mine for your brother. I wish I could do something like that for a change. I'm getting sick of this razor business."

"Here is one more that Wilfred wrote, and I gues this is the one that made them send him the fifteen dollars. Listen to this one, George, and then I won't bother you any more:

"When my poor spirits sad do droop
I always take a bowl of soup.
When I am full of soup, I find
That I have a contented mind.
I buy the best that can be had,
For mediocre soup is bad.
Give me the soup that stands the test;
Oh P. T. Clancy makes the best."

"Poets broke over quite a lot of things," said the Head Barber, "and I suppose maybe your brother is the first one that ever wrote nice lines about that soup. It must be strange to him."

"I don't think," said the Manicure Lady. "Somehow, all of Wilfred's poetry always sounded kind of soupy to me."

Up-to-Date Jokes

Apropos of Mr. Joseph Chamberlain's retirement a good story is told by the Rev. Arthur Mursell, in his recently published memoirs. It occurred on the occasion of Lord Rosebery's installation in the chair of the Junior Liberal Association at Birmingham. Observing an animated verbal duel between Mr. Jesse Collings and Mr. J. S. Wright, Mr. Chamberlain asked:

"What are Collins and Wright fighting about? They are like the lion and the unicorn fighting for the crown."

"Well," quickly replied Mr. Powell Williams, who was seated near, "you wouldn't have them fight for half a crown, would you?"

Mr. Charles Frohman, the well-known theatrical manager, was once talking about his plans for the Winter.

"I had hoped that Sir George Alexander would go to the States," he said.

"Alexander isn't his right name, is it?" his friend asked.

"No," said Mr. Frohman, "his right name is Samson. It was a pity to change the name of Samson fur that of Alexander."

"But Alexander conquered the world, you know," said the other.

"Samson, however, is the more appropriate theatrical name," Mr. Frohman insisted. "Have you forgotten that Samson was the first man who brought down the house?"

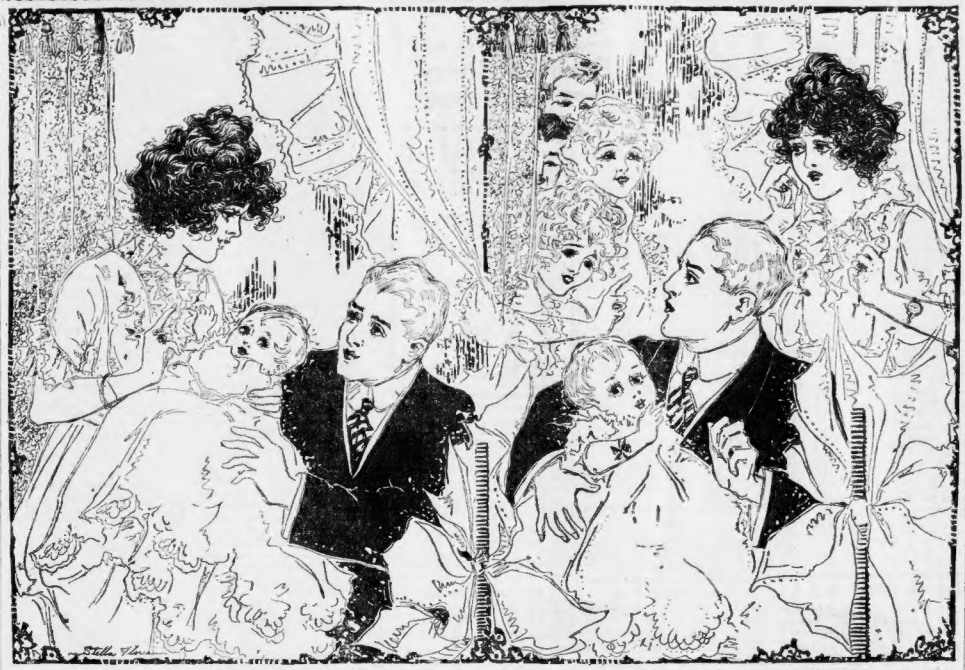
Bashful Bob

The Amusing Adventures of a Shy Young Man

No. 5—He Finds Some Things Are Too Good to Last

By STELLA FLORES

Copyright, 1914, by International News Service



IT was a seven days' wonder that Bob at last was calling on a girl. He found her one afternoon, all alone, taking care of her friend's baby while she was out. She had seen him coming just soon enough to send away the crowd of young folks that were there. But one of them had spied Bob, too. She made Bob hold the baby, to his great consternation. He had never held one before. It was really quite wonderful in its way, and after the first panic he looked at it more carefully.

JUST when he was beginning to half enjoy the tiny marvel of softness, and as Orchid—that was the city girl's name—was noting how his lashes matched the baby's in length, and that his eyes were quite as blue, the crowd came back. A snicker from behind the portieres revealed them.

"That wasn't funny!" Bob flared.

"I didn't ask you to come, anyway," she replied, her cheeks scarlet. And neither knew that the other was sorry two seconds later.

A Thrilling Story of Today—How a Pretty Girl Won Her Fight for Love Against Tremendous Odds

Begin This Great Story To-day by Reading This First

JERROLD SCOTT, a dignified-looking business man with offices in a big city skyscraper, advertises for a stenographer to act in the capacity of private secretary. Scott, although posing as an upright man, is in reality unscrupulous. He has several times been in trouble over stenographers to whom he made love, but persists in his infamy. Crane, his servile bookkeeper, sends in several applicants. Scott is struck by the physical attractions of Catherine Wiggins and questions her closely. He tells her to return at 11 o'clock. Jack Scott, the elder Scott's step-son, is junior partner of the firm. He has just come of age and is expecting to be a full-fledged partner.

Now Go On With the Story

Based on Jacqun Lait's success of the same name now running in New York. Copyright, 1914, by H. W. Denlon and Jacqun Lait. Sole serial rights in United States owned by International News Service.

By WEBSTER DENISON.

PROUD and happy now in his newfound importance, he came into the private office to consult his senior and found him gone. He tarried for a moment, breathing in the atmosphere of the boss' sanctum—the inner circle of a great enterprise of which he was now a part.

He felt the thrill that any right-minded boy, rich or poor, feels when he takes his first position among the world's workers. Perhaps it was the more enjoyable in his case because it was voluntary, of at least unnecessary. He might have prolonged his playtime after the college days indefinitely, if he had cared to. There is plenty to attract the idler in New York, especially one so fortunately situated as Jack Scott. Europe, too, is a magnet for the average son of a millionaire, but Jack was different. He was no prude. He enjoyed his fun as much as anybody, and he had an unlimited supply of it at school. But with it he had mingled work. He had learned the lesson that most boys learn who come out of a big American university with any kind of colors—that to enjoy play it is necessary to temper it with attention to the material things. He had to work to maintain his class standing, and he had to work to hold his own among the athletes. It was fun if you got the right viewpoint. That was what college had done for him. It had given him a true perspective, and he was eager to take up the struggle where he had left off.

He was equipped for it, too, was young Scott. From his father's side he had a heritage of shrewd, almost cunning, business tact, combined with nervous force and energy, and from his mother's side a genial manner and gentleness that won him friends. It was a combination that means much to a man of the world—the ability to push self without knocking every one else down in the process. So far, these characteristics had asserted themselves only in their formative state, but they were inherent and thoroughly intrenched.

A HANDSOME YOUTH

Physically the boy was also favored. He was a little under the usual height and might have been called slight, but he was moulded in perfect frame and possessed virile and vigorous strength. His light hair curled and lay close matted to his head. His blue eyes gleamed and twinkled. His step was quick and elastic and his speech kept atune with that. And when Jack Scott smiled, one knew he meant it. It was a full-hearted smile and not a silly one.

The boy's position as partner in the firm was, of course, only a nominal or honorary one. He had yet to climb the ladder, but he was most fortunately launched on the undertaking. His first duties were to be those of clerk in the auditing department, and he had come now to consult with his father concerning his induction to them.

Swift & Company's sales of Beef in Boston for the week ending Saturday, March 7, averaged as follows: Domestic Beef 12.22 cents. Imported Beef 10.49 cents per pound.

An opening door arrested his departure through Scott's private entrance. He turned to see a girl timorously withdrawing through the door.

"Come in," he called, a little confused. "Were you looking for—me?"

"I was looking for a position," the young woman answered. "I came in answer to—to that advertisement for a stenographer. I must have gotten into the wrong room."

"That's all right," the young man responded amiably. "I don't know about the ad, but I'll find out for you. The hall boy must have gone out. Come in and sit down, won't you?" he urged as she seemed undecided. "I'm Mr. Scott. Who are you?"

"Gertrude Meyer."

His smile reassured her. She advanced toward him. But one said incredulously: "Are you Mr. Scott?"

"Certainly," he laughed. "Not the Mr. Scott, but I'm one of them. I'm the son," he added, pointing to the newly painted sign on the door. "And are you a stenographer?"

She flushed at his good-natured accent of the pronoun.

"I hope to be," she faltered. "I haven't found a position yet. It's hard without experience."

"Every one must start some time," he said encouragingly. "I'm doing that myself. You know the most experienced had to be beginners in some place."

A SAD STORY

"I suppose that's true," she agreed, "but I hope they didn't all have as many disappointments as I've had."

"Disappointments?" he echoed sympathetically. "Have you been looking for work co very long?"

"I've answered 'Help Wanted' ads for five weeks, since I came out of school, and I have not been able to get even a trial. There are so many girls looking for positions of this kind.

"Yes, I know. But gee," he added without attempt to conceal a note of admiration in his tone, "you should not have any trouble. That is, I'd engage you if I could.

"Then you're different," she answered. "In most places I wait and wait and don't even see the man who engages the girls. In other places men ask all sorts of questions and they say they'll write and let me know, but they never do."

"Well, you'll get an audience here," the boy said assuringly. "You must stay right here. Mr. Scott is my stepfather and I became his partner today. He'll be back any minute and I'll introduce you."

"You're awfully kind," she stammered gratefully. She smiled at him and young Scott felt that he was the debtor. For the girl's part she was almost ready to burst into tears. Her reception here had been so extraordinarily different than elsewhere that she was unnerved.

The arrival of Jerrold Scott relieved her of further anxieties.

"Hello, partner!" said the elder in greeting to the son. On the job bright and early."

He caught sight of the girl.

"This young lady waiting to see me?"

"Yes," said the boy quickly. "She came in answer to your ad."

Household Hints

When boiling any kind of greens, use sugar in place of soda, which gives the greens a much better flavor, but they then require a little longer cooking.

When washing chamois leathers add a little ammonia to the water. This cleans them beautifully and helps to make them soft and pliable.

"PLEASE" writes a father, "decide a dispute between mother and father and a daughter of seventeen who is keeping company with a young man who calls at the house every evening. The parlor is in the centre of the house, with the dining room next, and the kitchen in the rear. Is it right for the father to have to sit, evening after evening, in the kitchen to read, with both the kitchen and dining-room doors closed, and the young man alone in the parlor with the daughter from seven till ten?"

Is it right to let any young man who comes to the house enjoy a comfortable room that is denied to the man who owns it?

Is it right to let a girl of seventeen spend her evenings alone and secluded with a man, with every opportunity to do wrong, and the girl's own parents, by their exclusion, almost sanctioning it?

Is it right, in other words, to make of HOME the one spot on earth where a girl should be guarded from temptation, the one place where it is clothed in respectability and given shelter?

HE IS YOUNG

The young man in the parlor may be both honest and honorable, but he is also young and weak and needs guarding against temptation fully so much as the young girl left alone with him every evening after evening. There is a good deal of the wolf in the best man's love and the wolf in him is never so reckless, so fierce, or so hungry as when he is too young to have tasted the punishments and disgrace an uncontrolled appetite brings.

A young man and a young woman who love each other should have a chance, by glance and word, to declare that love, without the presence of the unwelcome third party, but a right to make love, unobserved, becomes a license to all lack of restraint, when they are shut off seven nights a week, in the isolation that this daughter-controlled home permits.

NOT DEVELOPED

A girl of seventeen is too young for many things, the chief of which is to hold the whip-hand in her home. She is too young—the will always be too young—to have the right to place the comfort of any man she knows above that of her parents—to regard his wishes as paramount to their commands, to listen to a love story that is told at a sacrifice of the dignity of the other members of her family.

And a girl of seventeen is too young to hear a love story under any circumstances. She is green of judgment and unripe of wisdom, and Love should wait on the fruition of these two.

I want Love to have a chance. It is the best there is in life—it is all there is in life—but it is not a love worth while when its telling condemns the parents of a girl to spend all their evenings in the kitchen.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

DON'T GIVE UP SO MUCH

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young lady nineteen years old and have been keeping company with a young man two months my senior. He comes to see me twice a week, but won't take me to any dances or shows. He says they are not decent. He loves me, and he has told me so, and I love him. Please advise me what to do, as I am considered a good dancer and surely would like to go with him. MARY.

THERE are decent dances and shows that are both moral and entertaining. Don't give up all amusements because of his narrow-minded verdicts; you will have to give up more after you have married him.

LEARN, BY ALL MEANS

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am a young man, nineteen years old, and have been keeping company with a few young ladies, but cannot keep up with them because I cannot dance. A chum of mine said: "Jack, you will never be able to keep company with young ladies unless you learn to dance."

Please advise me whether I shall learn to dance or not. JACK.

THE dance will never more popular an amusement than it is today. Learn, by all means. If you make sure of good associates, you will find it both a harmless and entertaining diversion.

SHE IS RIGHT

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am twenty-four years of age and have a good future. I am at present earning $125 per month and have a legal education.

A few months ago I met a widow of forty-five years and I have since leaped to love her. She has three children, two boys and one girl. I expressed my love, but she advised me to give the matter due consideration on account of the difference in our ages. S. R. K.

NOTHING but regret for both of you would result from such a union. I hope she will continue in her present attitude of good sense and refuse to marry you, no matter how much you urge her.

LATEST STOCK MARKETS

By W. H. ROSS, Financial Editor

Stocks ranged higher this afternoon, having retained early gains in most instances. The relaxation of pressure upon Americans in London was helpful to bull interest. In New York after midday gains included St. Paul ¾, Canadian Pacific 1, Southern Pacific ¾, Missouri Pacific ¾, Northern Pacific 1¼, Union Pacific ¼, Baltimore & Ohio ¼, New Haven 1, American Telephone ¼, Steel ¾, Amalgamated ⅝ and United States Express 8½. Among declines were Chesapeake & Ohio 2¼, General Motors 1, American Can ¾, Lehigh Valley ¾. American Sugar was off 1¾. It had previously sold below par.

In Boston, where the market opened quietly and the weakness of American Sugar was the morning feature, prices ranged higher by afternoon. Boston & Maine was up 1 and New Haven ¾. Boston Elevated and United Fruit were unchanged. U. S. Smelting was off on a point. Granby and Island Creek were each a point higher.

PRICES STARTED FIRM.

There was a steady tone to the New York market at the start, with prices averaging fractionally higher. Most of them made more gains during the first hour, when transactions totalled more than 112,000 shares. The fact that most Americans had sold higher in London helped on this side of the ocean.

There was a disposition to await the report of the United States Steel Corporation as to unfilled tonnage on its books at the end of February. At noon when the statement was issued it showed an increase of 412,760 tons, as compared with unfilled orders at the end of January. On February 28 unfilled orders totalled 5,626,446 tons, compared with 4,613,680 on January 31 last, and 7,656,714 on February 28, 1913. An increase of about 300,000 tons had been predicted.

One feature was the continued rise of United States Express because of the spread of the belief that the company will liquidate and retire. Chesapeake & Ohio sagged further, touching within a few minutes its lowest price in years. Traders said that its dividend would be cut. If it was not discontinued Lehigh Valley was weak in early trading, selling well under 144.

MARKET STAYED STRONG.

The price improvement, taking the list as a whole, was maintained throughout the forenoon, a second hour feature being the advance of more than a point for New Haven. The statement by bankers regarding their profits out of this road had the effect, it appears, of inspiring more confidence on the part of stockholders. American Sugar declined several points, but showed at times a strong specialty. Fluctuations were small as a rule.

COPPER METAL MARKET.

Amalgamated was the only share dealt in during the morning, and this was partly because of the Copper Producers' report that surplus stocks had decreased nearly 9,000,000 pounds in February. The decrease was due principally to foreign buying of the metal. But statistics did not strengthen the price of metal much abroad. Regarding current prices, the London News Bureau prints a cablegram from London, reading: "Practically all dealers are offering electrolytic on the Continent at £66 2s 6d (14.35 cents); American Smelting agency £66 (14.52 cents) here and on the Continent."

Nothing has been heard so far today concerning demand by American consumers. There was hope in the trade that a favorable report by producers would stimulate domestic buying.

MEXICO A BOGEY.

Fear of intervention in Mexico and the unsettling effect it would have upon stocks continued to be an underlying market influence. A large percentage of operations believes that intervasion of Mexico is only a question of time and that forces are gathering which President Wilson cannot hold in check, especially with the Department of State being directed as at present. A Washington dispatch said that Secretary Bryan had called into consultation John Bassett Moore, who has resigned from the department, was considered significant of incapacity in that branch of government. One dispatch from the City of Mexico may indicate where the chief peril to follow intervention would lie, it reading: "A Japanese syndicate is headed by Baron Takahasna, president of Yokohama Specie Bank, has been formed, with capital of $300,000,000, to exploit Mexico's resources."

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON.

News from Washington received during the morning as regards the status of affairs below the Rio Grande was more reassuring than otherwise. The report that the administration had decided that anti-trust bills must be revised promoted confidence. It being assumed that President Wilson considers proposed restrictions upon trade relations and interlocking directorates to be too drastic, as the measures now stand. "Members of the Judiciary Committee," it is stated, "are no longer very optimistic about prospect for trust legislation. They do not expect the bills to be passed by June." There are increasing indications that vigorous opposition to various features of the bills will develop when they reach the House."

By noon the market was strong, with Westinghouse and American Sugar about the only important issues to show much loss.

On March 4 last deposits of the First National Bank of Boston totalled $50,490,389.04, and it had in cash and due from banks $35,106,163.51. Its demand loans totalled $15,271,167.02.

What the Automobile Means to Civilization and to the Individual

The man who makes a good automobile, efficient and cheap for the crowd, or magnificent and dear for the few, is a benefactor of humanity.

Great events come upon us so quickly that we scarcely see their meaning.

Few of us realize that the automobile has done for the body of man what the telephone has done for his voice.

The ONE PROBLEM of life is speed.

He who can move, think and act quickly doubles his life.

The automobile doubles the life and power of the busy man. To be without an automobile, if you can possibly manage to get one, is to be out of date, cousin to the dodo, and brother to the ox.

The struggle for speed has been the story of mankind. The telephone conquered distance for the voice, the telegraph conquered distance for the written message.

The automobile enables man to move about as rapidly as the bird—and now the intelligent citizen is asking himself, "WHAT machine shall I buy?"

Let us give some reasons why every man who can should buy some machine—big, snorting and expensive, if he can afford it, smaller, less expensive, but the greatest possible addition to life, if the big one is too costly.

The automobile means economy.

All that a man has in this life is TIME, and very little of that.

The automobile adds to the power of an hour, adds hours to a man's day, doubles, triples and quadruples his EFFICIENCY. And this does not apply only to the doctor, with his many visits, or to the fashionable women rushed in nine directions by calling, shopping and other pleasures and duties.

The automobile will do more for a small plumber than for a man of leisure. It will do more for a butcher, small contractor or other little business man than for the richest citizen. Because the little man is more in need of the machine that means more work accomplished.

Long ago, when only "dudes," so-called, rode bicycles, the envious scattered tacks and broken glass along the roads.

We used to tell the workers then that one day THEY would be the chief users of the bicycle—and that statement is now fact. We tell the workers today that the time is coming when to them more than to any other class the cheap automobile or motorcycle car will be the greatest blessing, another "freeing of the serfs."

A workman now can hardly believe that he ever opposed the bicycle as the amusement of the rich—but he DID that.

In a short time it will be unbelievable that vexatious laws and innumerable annoyances should have been devised to harass those engaged in developing the automobile.

You can get a car now that will carry five men eighteen miles for twenty cents worth of gasoline.

The man who writes this, with fifty horses standing in the stable on his farm, bought two automobiles to send farm hands to their work. It was foolish waste to let the men jog slowly behind farm horses, and the machines COST LESS THAN THE HORSES, even on a farm that produces the horses' food and does not yield gasoline.

The day is here when the smallest tradesman, builder, skilled mechanic, can own an automobile ECONOMICALLY. Let a man care for his own machine—an intelligent boy of fifteen can do it.

Let the owner consider that he is using HIS valuable property as he drives. Then the life of a machine low in price is almost without limit. And the ownership of a car, far from being an extravagance, is an actual economy. It saves time and makes money during the week. It gives happiness to the entire family on Sunday. It is a healthful, useful pleasure that discourages pleasures that are harmful.

The money that has carried hundreds of thousands of men no farther than the corner saloon would take the whole family out in the country on Sunday.

The little man's car is here already. The workman's car is not far away. Within five years the tin dinner pail will rest beside the clutch and the brake at the bottom of a small car. The wife will drive her husband to work—take her children to school, do her marketing—no longer tied down to the prices of the nearest store.

Many a weary workman at the day's end, seeing the birds flying so easily to their nests, has wished that he, too, had wings.

Now the automobile will actually GIVE him wings. The day's end need no longer mean a weary tramp across country roads, or a long journey, hanging to a strap in the city street cars. One workman will take his friend home one day. The friend will do the same next day.

And workers thus relieved of drudgery will have for their employers an added value greater than the cost of the gasoline.

First we had the "white ghost" and the "red devil," toys for rich young men.

Then we had beautiful, quite expensive limousines, ideal for nervous old ladies.

Then we got the wonderful machines of low price, within the reach of the citizens of small means. Soon we shall have the workman's car—then the automobile job will be complete.

What reward, what praise can be too great for the men who have put genius, fortune, inventive power, courage and endless ambition into the making of the nation's automobiles. Those men are m the highest sense benefactors of their kind. Long life to them, more success to them. They see ahead and know that the automobile age is just beginning. Our six million farms alone means six million automobiles—he who doubts that is a baby. The great work has only begun.

Three cheers for the automobile, which repays ten times over in health, cash and happiness every dollar that it costs.

HOW BILL GOT ALONG---No.7

Bill was up bright and early the next morning ready to hustle down to his new found job. As he was dressing his friend said, with a forced smile: "Gee! Bill, it's funny how things reverse themselves. The other day I was the one with the job and you were the one without it, but now it's you that's the meal ticket, and I've got to grub around and find a new place to hang my hat. Oh, yes; booze is a fine thing all right— to let alone."

Bill tried to cheer him up and told him, "That's all right now, Jim; you'll get another job all right, and perhaps better than the last one."

Things went along smoothly with Bill, and at the end of the first week he got his pay envelope with $12 in it. When he got home that night his friend, Jim, told him that he had nearly had a job that day, but didn't land it. He told Bill, "I answered an ad in the paper, but I felt so bum before I went in to see the big gink that hires the men that I went across the street and threw in a good, stiff shot of whiskey. When I got to see him, the first question he asked was, 'Do you drink?' and when I told him I did, but not to excess, he snapped out, 'We don't need you, for we can get plenty of men that don't. We can't trust any one in this job that drinks, and you've had some this morning.' Yes, indeed, Bill, as I've said before, whiskey is sure a great little booster for any one. The trouble is, though, Bill, it always boosts you toward the DOOR."

When Bill had paid the room rent and the laundry, his original $12 looked pretty sick, but he told Jim, "We can make it go all right, old man, and when you do land another job we'll have so much money we won't know where to put it."

The next day when Bill got home he found a letter from Emily telling him that she had always wanted to see Boston, and that she and her mother were coming to visit some friends there and for Bill to be sure and come to see her. She gave an address that was in a very swell neighborhood and Bill thought "Gee! I'd look swell going up there in these clothes, and they're all I've got, too." H. G.

The Two Sisters

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

CHAPTER XI.

THERE was silence for a moment after Julia Marvin and Kelley Delaine sat down on the bench in the little park. Their minds were so full of personal and intimate thoughts that any casual comment would seem trivial. The man was the first to speak.

"Is your headache better?" he asked gently. "You are pale still, but I do hope the pain is over."

"Oh, I am much better," the girl assured him. Then she demanded suddenly—"But how did you know I had a headache?"

"Your sister told me when I met her out walking yesterday soon," he replied.

Julia started in surprise. "You met Caryl?" she exclaimed. "She did not mention it to me."

"Didn't she?" returned the man briefly. Secretly he was musing that there were probably many things Caryl did not tell her sister.

"Then," said Julia, flushing consciously, "that was why you sent me those beautiful roses—because you knew that I was ill. It was very good of you, Mr. Delaine."

"How did you suspect I sent them?" he asked quickly. "You have other friends besides me."

"Indeed I haven't!" the girl protested—"at least not like you." Then she stopped, confused. "I mean" — she stammered— "that I know very few people in Boston, and those few only slightly. I ought not to say that I have no friends—for there are people who are very kind to me. There is Mr. Landlady, Mrs. Halloran—she's as good as gold to me. And the girls in the store are friendly enough, although I do not know any of them well. In fact, I have made no intimates in Boston, and my sister and I are very much alone. Each of us is all the other one has."

Her voice trembled slightly, and a question with regard to the man Caryl had met at Delaine's apartment arose to her lips. But before she could summon courage to voice her thought, the man spoke again.

"Any one of the persons you have mentioned might have sent you the roses for which you thank me, Miss Marvin," he reminded her. "Why, then, did you know at once that they came from me?"

"Because," she replied frankly, looking at him, "my little sister cannot afford to make such gifts, and none of the other people I know care enough for me to do so."

She paused suddenly, scarlet and embarrassed. Without meaning to, she had admitted to this man that she believed he cared more for her than did any other acquaintance she had in this great city. She attempted to repair her blunder.

"That is," she hastened to explain, "the others would not have as kindly a feeling"—

He interrupted her. "Please, Miss Marvin," he begged, "let your first sentence stand unchanged. It was absolutely true. Nobody else in Boston could care as much about you as I do."

"Oh, don't say that!" she begged. "You do not know me at all yet, and I probably would not improve upon acquaintance."

"Does any other man know you any better?" he asked abruptly, a jealous glint in his eyes.

She tried to smile. "There's no other man in Boston who knows me at all well," she acknowledged. "Thank goodness!" he exclaimed so fervently that they both laughed. The laugh relieved the strain and each spoke more freely after it.

"As I told you," Julia said, "I do not let myself know many people intimately. I am in the city with the purpose of making an honest living. I have no time to spend in forming friendships. Moreover, to be honest, if I cannot know the kind of people I would want to associate with, I would rather keep myself to myself. If I were to meet the nicest sort of persons my present means and position would make it impracticable for me to associate with them. So I would not meet them if I could, and I certainly could not if I would."

She meant to speak calmly, but a note of bitterness crept into her voice. She was cut off by circumstances from association with young people of tastes similar to her own. The man felt a great throb of pity for her.

"Yet in your own home," he began, then checked himself. He would not pry into her affairs. She spared him the necessity of further inquiry.

"My own mother died several years ago," she said simply. "She was all the friend we girls needed while we had her. My father married again—and our stepmother is —different. So we came to Boston."

"Ah, yes," he recalled. "Your sister mentioned the facts to me."

"Did Caryl"—she began. But she did not finish her sentence. A tall, good looking man was coming towards them along the little path, and, as Kelley Delaine, recognizing him, arose to his feet, the new arrival removed his hat with a slight bow towards Julia.

"Hello, Delaine!" he exclaimed. "I chanced to be walking along here and thought I recognized you sitting here like one of the bits of human driftwood one finds on a park bench. I have just come from my hotel, but the last mail before I left had brought me no letter from you. I wrote to you a day or so ago, asking you if you cared to buy a certain horse I know of. A friend of mine owns him, and as he—the friend, not the horse—is going abroad, wants to sell him. He is a good mount, so I thought at once of you and wrote you the facts."

"And I did," declared Delaine. "I wrote it this morning, just before going out of town on a matter of business. What did I do with that letter?" he muttered. "I declare!" with a sudden gleam of recollection, "I must have forgotten to mail it! It is probably lying on my desk still. I just got back an hour ago, and haven't been home yet."

"I see," replied Somerdyke. But his eyes were fixed on Julia, and he was evidently waiting to be introduced to her.

Lord Morley's Warnings

By EDWIN MARKHAM

LORD MORLEY'S address "On Politics and History," delivered before the University of Manchester, is now issued in book form. This scholarly discourse presents questions much in evidence in both Europe and America. Note this:

"Any reflective observer can sketch some of the signs of the times in rather formidable outline. Let us look at it. Political power is described as lying in the hands of a vast and mobile electorate, with scanty regard for tradition or history.

"'What is history to me?' asks the plain busy man. Democracy, they warn us, is going to insist on writing its own program. The structure of executive organs and machinery is undergoing half-hidden but profound alterations.

"The two Houses of Parliament are being fundamentally transformed before our eyes. The cabinet, keystone of the arch, in size and in prerogative, is not altogether safe against invasion. The great wholesome system of party is said to be melting into groups and coalitions. The growth of special interests,' each claiming for itself a representative Minister in the Cabinet, has turned it into a noun of multitude indeed, and a noun not wholly favorable to that concentrated deliberation which was possible when Pitt had first six, then seven colleagues, Peel twelve, and Gladstone fourteen. Today we are a score.

"A body of professional experts is now united to a selected body of ministers, to shape conclusions in the sphere of military defense, and therefore of expenditure; and such conclusions, though nominally advisory or for information only, naturally carry a weight that can not but affect the judgment and responsibility of a cabinet.

"More than all this alteration in machinery are signs of change in national atmosphere. These we have good reason to hope, may be only superficial and transient, for nothing is more certain than that in a survey of the modern world, national character is slowest of all things to alter in its roots.

"Meanwhile, we discover a shaken attitude toward law as law; a decline to reverence for institutions as institutions a latter-day antinomianism. Even powerful lawyers use language that treats a statute as a cobweb, and sealed agreements by great industrial organizations are sometimes no better than ropes of sand.

"Nor is the change peculiar to England. American citizens of a reflective turn sometimes tell us of the same thing even there. If we remember, for instance, that administration of law is the keystone of all civilized government, it is startling to hear American statesmen, who have held posts of supreme responsibility, passionately denouncing the administration of criminal law as a disgrace to their country, and declaring the English system of judges appointed for life to be better than their system of elected judges. Or else, on the other hand, they demand appeal to a popular referendum against decisions of State courts on constitutional issues, and are for cashiering the judges who made them—in either case shattering the foundations of the judicial fabric."

The Drug Habit—"American Society, from the Underworld to the Unemployed Rich, Has Its Hundreds of Thousands of Drug Devotees."

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1914, by the Star Company

WHEN you talk about the opium habit of the Chinese people do you know who started them on this long lane which has so few turnings (and those turnings always downward)?

Those "pagan people" were forced into the opium traffic by the most orthodox of Christian nations, the British.

Opium brings England $20,000,000 a year.

At one time a Parliamentary commission was appointed to investigate the effect of opium on the Chinese race, and the British official in charge of the matter swore roundly that it was no more harmful than "twiddling one's thumbs."

This in face of the awful evils which result from the drug. To such depths will a desire for financial profit drag Christians. It has been said that "eleven men out of every ten" smoke opium in China. And this habit can be traced directly to Great Britain.

America is honeycombed with opium dens. And American society, from the underworld to the unemployed rich, has its hundreds of thousands of drug devotees.

Ask the messenger boys of any of our large cities what they know about it. These boys are the go-betweens who bring the drugs to the unfortunate victims of the habit in dens of vice and in palatial homes, oftentimes where the regular employes of the house would not permit the poison to enter in any regular manner. But the messenger boy can always enter. Just as the physician can always enter.

In the days of our Pilgrim Fathers and their successors there was no such thing as a drug menace. It seemed to enter America during the Civil War. And since then it has grown, until it is a colossal evil, aided and abetted by a large percentage of physicians and helped by druggists and virtually ignored by the Church and society.

A woman has written from facts a most remarkable novel in which this national menace is terribly and truthfully depicted. The book of Job gives the title to this novel in the following quotation on the fly leaf:

"Canst thou draw out Leviathan with a hook? Upon the earth there is not one like him. He is king over all the children of pride. When he raiseth himself up, the mighty are afraid. In his neck remaineth strength, and sorrow is turned into joy before him."

It is because of this last sentence, perhaps, that the dread drug can be most likened to Leviathan, since so many sad souls and troubled hearts and suffering bodies find temporary joy in the merciless grasp of the drug.

But God and all his hosts of Ministering Angels must come to the rescue of one who seeks such joy, or the end is misery, shame and despair.

The author has painted in vivid colors the terrible fight made by a brave soul to overcome the drug habit after it had been contracted and after repeated efforts and failures to abandon it, and she sends her great books with her hero cured and in perfect health and the father of robust children.

The author makes this charge: "Opium, laudanum, morphia, etc., is not the tragedy of the underworld, nor of the lap-dog world. It is the tragedy of the working world—of doctors, writers, lecturers, scientists, teachers, students—both men and women."

Then she adds:

"It's a national problem that cannot be settled by sending one man or even many to jail. It's a monster that has crawled up out of the dark on the American people. What are we going to do about it? What are the doctors going to do about it, the federal authorities, public-spirited men and women, public opinion, the press?

"It is a national problem, and watching boundaries, guarding ports, making occasional raids, can accomplish but little to keep back the evil; medical men united, an aroused public opinion, the work of women, the press, I suppose, could do everything. Here are some suggestions for the control of the evil:

"First, the passing of strict laws which will allow habit-forming drugs to be bought only on a physician's prescription.

"Second, a law that will make it impossible for a prescription to be refilled except through a doctor's order.

"Third, education of the public through the schools, colleges and churches of the country.

"Fourth, federal and State sanatoria for drug addicts and alcoholics.

"Fifth, the creation of a sense of personal responsibility on the part of physicians and pharmacists for this condition of affairs.

"Sixth, a law making illegal sale of drugs a State's prison offense.

"Seventh, the present laws regarding labelling enforced and extended.

"Eighth, the present trade in all patent and proprietary medicines containing habit-forming drugs to be discontinued and absolutely prohibited by federal laws.

"Ninth, the annulling of the licenses of those doctors and druggists who are known to be addicts and the periodical examination of all medical men and pharmacists by federal officers to ascertain their continued freedom from such addictions.

"Tenth, passing upon all advertisements relating to drug and drink 'cures' by a federal bureau.

"And, eleventh, the suppression of alcoholism.

"I believe enough people could be got together in every city, town and village of this country through the school, the church, the grange, the labor unions, to fight this thing and to drag it out into the light, where ventilation and publicity would do their work in arousing a nation-wide hostility to an evil which places us ethically and physically below such countries as Germany, Holland, Italy and Spain, where there are laws; and, be it said, the laws are effective. What the Chinese have been doing, are doing, we can do, too."

Read this book, and talk about it; and think and talk and work to help overcome this evil in our midst.

If you have been spared any personal acquaintance with the drug habit, kneel down and thank God, whose strength has surrounded you; and if you have formed this habit in ever so slight a degree, kneel and ask God's help and guidance to overcome it.

No matter how you may be troubled with sleeplessness, or headaches, avoid the seemingly innocent quieting powder. Put no faith in any physician who prescribes such things for you.

If you are in the grasp of this monster, do not despair. Resolve to be cured.

Reduce the quantity every day a little, and when you have reached the limit of your strength in this reform, seek the aid of some trustworthy specialist and place yourself under treatment.

Call to the invisible helpers to come to your aid. Ask for guidance and never doubt that it will be given. And never rest or give up the battle until you win, as John Dean won, in this remarkable book.

Read the book; it will help you to see the way.

Down in Mexico

By W. H. ROSS

A WATCHFUL waiter in the sky, poised in a vault of blue,
The Aztec vulture scans the land where lurks the Villa crew;
And what it sees is heard, he plunges down to gorge upon the dead,
Soon with the gore of Yankee blood his beak is dripping red.
The anguished cry of Northern maid, a brutal bandit's prey,
Disturbs him not in grewsome feast where murdered Gringos lay;
There is no law, no mercy, no honor, hope or trust
Where Stars and Stripes are trodden by Greasers into dust;
And half the tale of horror the world will never know,
For the dead can bear no witness—down in Mexico.
If a nation which was born of war cannot protect its own,
Shrinking from its human duty when the gage of fate is thrown,
Let it lower its flag forever, raze the spire on Bunker Hill,
And for peace and plenty humbly yield to alien will;
Let it hire its soldiers out in shops, send no warship oversea,
Supinely do its homage to a better race than we.
For braver men in other climes the way to us will show,
Let the Kaiser or Old England send their troops to Mexico!
